6. A three page letter, with original envelope, sent to the "President of the U of U". The letter was received July 15, 1997.

Details: During the month of May, 1997, the President of the University of Utah began to receive letters and phone calls from former student [redacted] regarding [redacted] $24,000.00 student loans obligation which had recently been turned over to a collection agency.

[redacted] initial communications were requests for assistance in resolving the student loan issue. Once it became clear that the University of Utah was not going to "forgive" [redacted] student loans, the telephone calls ceased, but the University was then hit with a barrage of letters filled with allegations of unfair treatment, wrongful expulsion, prejudice and police/FBI brutality. [redacted] demanded that his student loan obligation be forgiven or the President and the University would suffer [redacted] retaliation.

[redacted] attempted to draw the LDS Church into this controversy by demanding that Church President, Gordon B. Hinckley, force the University of Utah to see things [redacted]

Because of the nature of [redacted] threats, the U.S. Attorney's Office in Salt Lake has decided to indict [redacted] sending threatening communications through the mail. An element of the crime is proving that [redacted] mailed or produced the documents. Therefore, they are being sent to the lab for examination.

MARK HARRISON FOR THE TORONTO STAR

WITNESS: Dale Minard describes shooting.

SCENE OF THE CRIME: Witnesses say OPP Constable Tom Coffin, a 34-year-old father of three, was sitting at the bar of the Commodore Hotel in Penetanguishene, above, on Saturday morning when a man put a handgun to the officer's head and fired on him.

enormous shock in this town of 7,000 people where MacDonald had announced his intentions to run for mayor in the upcoming municipal election. Hembruff said telling his granddaughter Laura, 7, that her father was dead was the toughest thing he's ever had to do in 29 years of policing.

"Right away she says, 'Papa, is the bad man going to kill you, too, because you are a policeman?'"

Hembruff said he knew the popular young officer since he was 15 and a minor hockey player on a team he coached.

Coffin, a native of Alliston, first joined his home-town police as an auxiliary constable and then became a constable on the Kirkland Lake force while Hembruff was chief. He married Wendy Hembruff, his high-school sweetheart, and they had Laura.

He transferred to the Penetanguishene force six years ago.

Even when the couple divorced, they all remained "good solid friends," Hembruff said.

"He was fine man, an outstanding young chap. He had good sense, good humor ... he was the sort of guy you'd like right away."

Coffin decided to go to the hotel to watch boxing with a couple of other off-duty officers after having dinner at the end of his afternoon shift, Hembruff said.

The bar, a popular local hangout, was packed yet witnesses said they didn't realize what had happened until Coffin fell from his stool.

Jack Steele, a friend of Coffin's, said one witness described the officer as being "executed."

"This guy walks in — I remember looking over at him — he pushed us out of the way, very calmly and walked up to the back of this gentleman sitting at the bar and put the gun up against the back of his head and just pulled the trigger," said Dale Menard who was standing near Coffin.

"He said, 'Excuse me' and walked out ... he just walked out of the door didn't even look back. We couldn't believe it.

"I mean it doesn't happen in a little town you know. I think that was mostly the shock," he said.

One or two witnesses followed the shooter from the bar and watched him stroll about 150 metres to a tan-colored brick house.

About 7 a.m. yesterday, heavily armed tactical officers from the OPP surrounded a house less than a block from the Commodore Hotel.

"I was shocked they had rifles and loudspeakers," said neighbor Don Brunelle.

The officers yelled for a man inside to pick up the phone before throwing a flash grenade into the house.

Minutes later, a man surrendered, neighbors said.

Wilf LaLonde, 77, said he was shocked that MacDonald — "the nicest guy, didn't give no trouble" — was a suspect in the shooting.

MacDonald had had a hard time since the impaired driving conviction last year, said LaLonde.

"He told me he couldn't work, because he couldn't drive to Toronto to work and he couldn't drive the fire truck without a licence," LaLonde said.

Because of this, MacDonald was forced to live in Metro Toronto on work days with the North York Fire Department, so he could bus to work.

He started talking about taking early retirement, LaLonde said.

MacDonald had often talked about his two adult children and the fact that his daughter was about to make him a grandfather.

"He always said he was looking forward to spoiling the grandchild rotten," LaLonde said.

MacDonald had served as chairperson of the Penetanguishene police services board until about a year ago.

Recently, Coffin spearheaded for the women's shelter in Midland, he was coach of the Penetang Kings Jr. C hockey team.

He and his second wife Kim had two sons, 3-year-old Jordon and an 18-month old Matthew.

"He was a great athlete, golf, baseball, hockey whatever he did," Hembruff said.

The Coffin family lives next door to Frank Vaters in a small subdivision opposite St. Ann's School in Penetanguishene.

Vaters describes them as good neighbors and said Coffin was a devoted husband and father.

"I guess everybody is in a state of shock," said Vaters his eyes filling with tears.

The Coffin family has lived in the neat raised bungalow next door to Vaters for about three years.

Coffin had recently fulfilled his long-time dream of playing golf on Scotland's famous St. Andrews course, the chief said.

"This community is going to be a long time getting over this. This sort of thing happens in Toronto, not here, not in this little town."

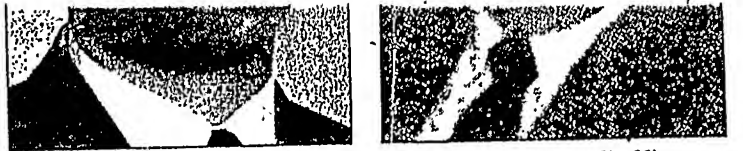

Funeral services for Coffin are set for Wednesday at the Presbyterian Church in Midland, Hembruff said.

Officer 'executed' in bar shooting

By PHILIP MASCOLL
STAFF REPORTER

PENETANGUISHENE — An off-duty OPP officer enjoying a drink after his shift was "executed" at a local bar early yesterday as horrified patrons looked on.

Within hours police had arrested a North York firefighter who is also former head of the Penetanguishene police commission.

Al MacDonald, believed to be 53, had not been charged but was still being questioned by Ontario Provincial Police late last night.

Constable Tom Coffin, a 34-year-old father of three, was sitting at the bar of the Commodore Hotel about 12:30 a.m. yesterday when a man calmly pushed his way through the crowd, put a handgun to the officer's head and fired one shot, witnesses said.

The man then put the shiny handgun in his pocket and walked out on to Main St., they said.

A year ago, Coffin charged MacDonald with impaired driving. MacDonald was convicted last Christmas and lost his driver's licence.

The two also had many dealings when MacDonald was chair of the Penetanguishene Police Commission, local residents say.

MacDonald had opposed absorption of the local Penetanguishene police force into the OPP and fought the officers' demands for severance pay when their local force was disbanded.

Coffin was a member of the bargaining committee that argued unsuccessfully for the severance.

Although the OPP would not release the name of the man in custody, former Midland police chief Larry Hembruff, father of Coffin's first wife, confirmed it was MacDonald.

Johnny "Pops" Papalia, once described by police as the most powerful mobster in Ontario, was shot dead execution-style yesterday across the street from the Hamilton home where he grew up.

Papalia, 73, was walking across the parking lot at his Galaxy Vending company on Railway St. at about 1:30 p.m. with a younger man when the shooting occurred, police said.

Officers said the two men were apparently having a conversation when the younger man, without warning, pulled out a gun and shot Papalia in the head at close range.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date of transcription 7/16/97

The following investigation was conducted by Special Agent (SA) [redacted] of the Salt Lake City Division of the FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION (FBI):

On July 14, 1997, [redacted]
[redacted] THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS (LDS Church), 50 East North Temple Street, Salt Lake City, Utah 84150, work telephone number (801) 240-2285, was interviewed regarding a June 30, 1997 letter received by The Office of GORDON B. HINCKLEY, President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

According to [redacted] over the past nine years, [redacted]
[redacted] the LDS Church has received several letters from [redacted] Church records reveal that those letters were received on December 25, 1986, July 7, 1988, July 22, 1988, November 5, 1992, November 10, 1992, December 14, 1992 and June 30, 1997.

These letters were examined in [redacted] office. [redacted] characterized them as emotional petitions for the church assistance to help right unspecified wrongs in our society. The letters clearly demonstrate [redacted] frustration which [redacted] believes has something to do with [redacted] poor social integration into American society, an unspecified incident which [redacted] believes has kept him from reaching his education, social and financial objectives, and finally [redacted] conversion to, and later excommunication from, the LDS Church.

According to [redacted] on June 30, 1997, the office of President GORDON B. HINCKLEY received a manilla envelope via the United States Mail. It was addressed to President HINCKLEY. The return address on the envelope was [redacted] [redacted] Seattle, Washington [redacted] The letter was typewritten and consists of an eight page main letter, and five attachments, each with its own of explanation. The letter is unsigned.

The attachments include:

Mr. Gordon B. Hinckley; President
L. D. S. Church
Salt Lake City, Utah 84150

Dear Sir:

Late 70's you came to Utah State University and preached to the school and students. I know that you put a lot of work and efforts to in the Missionary work.

You ship America's most valuable resources to our territory. You send Mohammed to the mountains. We treat them good.

We should always have collateral, and negotiate from the position of strength. We come to your school, at our own expense for education and friendship. You let the Mission to our jurisdiction and at our mercy. It is good for balance of power.

You treat us good in Utah, and we treat your loved ones good in Europe. We are all equal. One should not be more equal than the other. To this date, we treated your sons and daughters very good. Lead us not to temptation.

Your people, on the other hand, didn't treat me very good. It shows in the letter of regret I received from Ezra Benson. He knew that your people didn't treat me with good faith. Look at the copy of the 1988 letter. When I received it, I said, "Go to hell!" He went.

Our relationship was that in case of crisis we help each other without asking. If I see a Mormon brethren needs help, I am not going to stand idle. Ezra was asked to help, but the bastard refused. He asked everyone else for help but when we asked him, he ran for cover.

Now, you are in power. I am not going to let you be as ignorant as that dead soul. You are special. You have received the calling to act with positive mental attitude.

Please, don't think, not even for a moment that you are not going to get involved, it is not good for your prestige. Nine million people follows you. You are great and you are going to ignore me, because I am one of many millions. This time I want performance.

First rule of engagement: We can use Mormon Missionaries as collateral for specific performance. Take it easy and speak easy with me.

It is also in your Bible. Do it to others, as you want others do it for you. Whatever happens to me here, is going to happen to multitude of young Missionaries.

Second rule of engagement: I am not Christian, I am not Mormon. I am not Moslem. Keep those Scriptures, Gospels, and rules for yourself. Don't preach to me. Preach to others.

in 1985, the FBI, beat me up in my own home. It was not part of the deal to storm people at their own home and beat them up like Mr. Rodney King. the FBI beat me up, under the watchful eyes of your fucking Lord, and the Lord didn't do anything about it.

I decided, I don't need to worship your motherfucking God anymore. Sorry, I don't worship a God, who makes it possible for the FBI to storm my house and beat me up.

Third rule of engagement: I don't hire attorney.

I am not going to hire an attorney as suggested by Ezra Benson, in his letter dated July 15, 1988. Mr. Benson is better off dead than alive. He died.

Hire an attorney is what the enemy wants me to do, and I am not here to play in the hands of the enemy.

In October 1985, at around 8:15 A.M. I sat in my office at room 710, doing paper work. Suddenly a bomb went off under my chair, on the lower floor. It was room 610, at the old judge building. I thought I would get the blame. At that time I was the only reputable terrorist nearest the bomb.

It was the bomb that killed Mr. Steven F. Christensen. [redacted] used to be one of your customers. Your business in part is the business of bombs and bullets.

The Mormon Murders book, a true story of greed, forgery, deceit and death. By Steven Naifeh and Gregory White Smith, shows the real face of the Church. It is an eye opener. It shows you, more than anyone else, know that the Church is a fraud. Yet you are the President and selling fake faith.

With that introduction, lets get to the purpose of this letter.

October 8, 1981. Mr. Unabomber, another one of your citizens, according to the records, put his bomb at the computer lab college of business, University Of Utah.

It was a trap for the FBI, and the FBI fell in the trap. Mr. Unabomber, hit the target he aimed at. Mr. Unabomber knew, that by, putting the bomb nearest me a reputable terrorist at the time by White House propaganda, the FBI would start the go go dancing on and around me. The poor FBI agents were after me. He suckered them into it. It was a diversion that worked very well. He didn't do anything after that. For 15 years FBI was bothering me in waste.

For the FBI, it was the same thing they did in Atlanta. There was a bomb in Olympic park. The FBI went after [redacted] because he was the man nearest the bomb.

[redacted] was a police officer, familiar with the culture, rules, and regulations. It lasted him only a few weeks. I was a foreigner, not knowing the culture, rules, languages, and the problem. It still hunts me.

That is where you. Your God. Your Missionaries come into play. People believe in your words, as the words of God. What is the use of a man of God like you on earth who can't help a child of God like me?

I had a discussion with [redacted] You know, he is a good Mormon.

[redacted] Relative of former [redacted]
[redacted]

"Why you Americans drop that Atom bomb in Japan." I asked, "Killing civilians. You are not supposed to kill not combat people at war. It is murder."

"Those civilians voted and supported the Imperial Government of Japan." He answered, "They have to be punished for that." It stopped the war.

He was right. You must hit the creator, in order to stop the creature. It worked then, it works now. It works all the time. We have to use the Missionaries for negotiation, because they attract us to Utah.

That is why our people are going to hold the Mormon Missionaries all over the world, responsible for the activities of you people in Utah. You trespass against us in Utah. Forgive their trespasses in Japan and Germany against your people.

Every time you came to the Utah State University, you talked about the Mission work, I recall. That is important to you. My school work is important to me. Your people strike at my interest. We strike at your center of interest in return.

Other people, police officers, lawyers, and judges, they are inspired by you, and believe in your faith. They have their loved ones on the Mission too. The time has come for you to inspire them with your good work, Gospel, and Scripture.

Don't preach any of that Christianity, Scriptures, and Gospel to me. I don't believe in your faith, I know what is in it. It is not for me. Preach to your followers. It pays dividends to you.

The Mormon Murders book, describes you:

Hinckley is no Mahatma Gandhi. No waves of spirituality emanates from this person. No one comes away from meeting with you claiming his faith has been renewed. You are first, always, and last, a bureaucrat--Cool, precise, difficult when necessary; diplomatic, even charming, when appropriate; extremely effective at cutting through red tape and getting the job done. You are also notoriously shrewd about people.

Now, that is what I want. Someone extremely effective at cutting through red tape and getting the job done. That is called an angel of the Lord. President and Police red tapes me. You cut the red tape. We are done. We don't have any trouble.

You have received your calling from the Lord. No one else have this kind of qualifications on the planet earth that you have for the job. I have always been looking for a person with this qualifications to trust my work in his hand. I need divine intervention, and you are going to intervene.

The records in your church shows that I attended your Church for a long time. I married twice. Beautiful Mormon girls. I also have two sons who are Mormons. That shows I am on your side, and I wish the best for you.

It doesn't mean that you can do anything you want. Please do not make me angry, if you do not want to end up being sorry. I hated that Ezra Benson. He said no to me, while I tried to help. He deserved to die, and he did.

Here is the problem. The University of Utah President, and Police are not dealing with me in good faith. It is your job to call them and improve their faith in me and you. You have your school of religion right across from the University.

I wrote her a letter, but she didn't answer. I called her office. Her [redacted] said that the female decided not to dignify my request with a response. That made me angry. I don't take no for answer.

You and I both know, that the standard rule of conduct is that the petitioner comes to the office, he is handled in professional manner. The petitioner gets what he wants, and never calls back. We have better things to do with our lives than go and waste time in the office of a bitch at the University of Utah.

We know, that when the office doesn't answer, they want the customer to call back. They provoke him to react. I have a probable cause to believe that she is trying to seduce me.

You see some of this people get mad at their employers, because of bad treatment. The angry employee goes to the office and kills everyone in the office with a machine gun. Well, they are asking for it. I am going to let her be disappointed.

We Persians, never put females in charge of anything, their brain is incomplete. You will never see anyone one of us in public with a female. Females vote, but we don't count it.

I don't know, who in the hell put her in charge of University of Utah, while they are searching for a new President? Don't they have men in Utah?. What happened to the men that they are using the sisters now.

b7C

Here, they put the bitch in charge of the school, and we have to go through the Church to get a simple work done. That bitch, her head is playing chess with her vagina. She thought she didn't answer my request, and I am going to let her alone.

At any rate. Call her office, and tell her, I want a copy of all my records shipped to your office. A copy shipped to me. A copy shipped to a Federal Judge here in Seattle.

This includes drop and add cards. Letters wrote. Transcript. Police arrest. Hearings. Complaints. Anything and everything.

Here again, I don't wish to hear from you, like I heard from Ezra Benson. That you don't want to get involved. That it is not feasible for you to get involved. I am not here to please you. It is the other way around. It is not feasible for you not to get involved. Because if you don't get involved, you are going to witness some nasty reactions.

You are the man of God on earth. The Lord speaks to his children through you. I am a child of God. You have the right to know what is happening to me, and make sure that I am treated legally, the law of the Lord.

When I asked [] why she is not going to answer my letter. She said that police ordered her to do so. They have their guns over her head. I decided that was not part of the deal.

I have our gun over everyone else's head. The police goes and puts their gun over the head of people that I do business with. We are going to put our gun over the head of the police and ask them to drop their gun and back off.

Listen, I a cut a hair in two halves, from a distance two hundred and fifty meters with a bullet. Those over eating police officers would not be able to compete with me. Tell them to back off.

I have also been arrested and jailed for violation of loaded firearms. They know who I am I am also an expert in double motion military sniping. I don't take hit from anyone. I also have friends in that business and we trained together. And the death will rain upon them from darkness.

Every time I call the people in Utah, the police had been there already. From the academic counselor, University President, to my employer, and Federal Judges.

The police is always one step ahead of me and telling these people what to do, what to say, how to do it and how to say it. That is enough!

Police siad this. Police said that. Police wants this. Police wants that. We don't want police here. We don't want police gun over our head. Police! Police! Police! I had enough police. Lets put an end to police brutality, once and for all.

But before we do that, may be you can help. We don't want to use the Mormon Missionaries for target practice now, in order to send distress signal, and get your attention and that of the Police.

Reading the book about Mormon Murders. I enjoyed one section very much. It is section 60 in my book. I made a copy of it for you. It is when Detective Don Bell is trying to interview Elder Pinnock. The police officer needed a shove.

(As detective Bell drove to the First presidency Building, a delegation from the Church Security, headed by Martell Bird, was paying a visit to Bell's superior, Chief Bud Willoughby, to let him know what they thought of Detective Don Bell's manners.)

The fruit of that visit appeared later on: (Suddenly, one of the assistant chiefs, known to be a devout Mormon, slammed his hands down on his desk as hard as he could and leaped out of his chair.

"I am getting damned sick and tired of hearing they. They this, they that. Just who the hell is they? And he continued to rant until someone took him aside and calmed him down). Every one knew what his problem was-Just as everyone knew who "They" was. Detective Don Bell, however, never again acted in a that manner.

That is a very good idea. If [] can stop the police for [] he can stop the police for me also. I would appreciate it. Then I don't have to go the extra miles to rub it in through bothering with Missionaries overseas.

b7c

The Church's Security Office. they know the standard rules of police behavior. They know how to fix [] and his kinds. They should be able to pay a visit to University Police, and improve their faith in you and me. Lets get the ball rolling.

b6
b7c

See. I am Persian-American. I have lots of friends in Mormon church. I also have lots of friends in Moslem world. Neither of you believe in police brutality. I have a double barrel over under shot gun in my hands. The over barrel is my Mormon children. The under barrel is my Moslem friends.

Every one of the ruling Moslems in Iran. They are the people who opposed the Shah's secret police brutality. They had been jailed by the Shah's police. They hate police brutality, and they deal with it with iron fist.

I called a few of them for assistance. One of the most daring ones returned the call and said, "Let the FBI know, that we would be able to hit them at the highest level." Well, that is comforting. I know that my redeemer lives. What comfort this sweet sentence gives.

The President calls Iran a Terrorist State. They are proud of it. More power to it. They worked hard to earn that reputation. Therefore you do know what are you dealing with. I much rather have the terrorists on my side, than against me. With Allah on my side, we shall fear no one.

I believe that Police in Utah needs a shove. The Church have done it before. You are welcome to do it again. Make them to back off, once and for ever.

This is the area, that we are going to use Mormon Missionaries for negotiation. Let me give you the ultimatum. If police bothers with me again. People are going to bother with Missionaries, and you are going to hear about it.

Their families are going to come to the office of the First Presidency, with tears in their eyes and say. We send our loved ones to do the work of the Lord, not to the battle ground, to pay for the sins of a few police officers in Utah.

If I ever call the authorities in Utah, and hear that the police put people under pressure and interfered with their freedom of decision making. You bet your ass that you are going to receive a call from one of those Mormon Missions overseas that someone intervned with their freedom.

Someone interferes with the freedom of spreading their Toxic Gospel. Not too many of them are going to go on the Mission. It is not going to be very good for their reputation. I know that they already move under very tight security, but they can be out numbered.

I know the police have faith in you. They pray to your God before they go to their work. You just have to guide them to have good faith and manners. We don't wish to use the Missionaries for target practice in Europe, because of Police brutally in Utah.

But if you don't leave us any options, nothing we can do about it. I never wanted to end up to this position. You have to blame your brutal police.

Remember what those police officers, courts, lawyers and judges did in Los Angeles. The black people burned an entire section of the city. That is what I am talking about.

Tell the University Police to ship my police records to your office and back off. That way we do not have to deal with them again. They have to ship all of it, so that nothing have to be added or subtracted.

Don't offer me excuse like Ezra Benson did. See what happened to him. He went to hell, but the work is still here. I don't want you to go to hell like him, and let this work continue.

I am not going to hire a lawyer, as suggested by Mr. Benson. Forget it. If the lawyer is so good, you hire one for me, at your own expense. I don't mind using them. I am Zoroastrian in faith, and we don't believe in lawyers.

See what the Unabomber did to those people. Poked one eye out. Chopped one hand off. Killed two people. Learn from it and don't tell me to hire a lawyer like Ezra Benson did.

I call the Unabomber the avenging angel. The FBI beat me up in Utah, the Unabomber killed an American in California almost 40 days later. That is a good price to pay. You beat one of us in Utah. One of you ends up dead in California. Mormons and Moslems believe in death penalty.

You are from God. You are gifted with intelligence. You know what to do, and what to pray for. With almighty God on your side, we don't need lawyers. Do what is right, and let the consequences to follow.

I suggest you finish this work first. I need your help, and you are going to help me. I don't accept excuses. Don't expose your loved ones to danger.

I mail a copy of this letter to a national newspaper. So that I keep the American informed, as of how you Mormons deal with children of God. So that those people who ship their loved ones to Mission, know how much you care about them. If anyone got hit, then everyone knows where it came from and what was it for.

I mail a copy of this letter to the President of the University of Utah. So that she recognize your authority for divine intervention.

In God we trust. God better be on my side, or we will have a fight with God. Amen!

Sincerely;

[Redacted Signature]

This is what I want:

First, last, and always, a bureaucrat--Cool, precise, difficult when necessary; diplomatic, even charming, when appropriate, extremely effective at cutting through red tape and getting the job done. He is also notoriously shrewd about people.

I don't know what the Lord have in it for me. I know when it all started, I decided to let the Lord take over, and trust everything in his hands. The answer came out of the lips of a very old lady [REDACTED]

She said, "Take it easy and go with the flow. Be truthful with yourself and trust the Lord. When your time comes, anything, and any one you want will be right at hand."

I believe that. She didn't know what was involved. I didn't know what was in it. I didn't know that I was a bomber suspect and the FBI was bothering me to become their victims.

I didn't know what the Lord planned for me. But, now, I know that since the Unabomber is arrested, and I am not involved. You are here to assist me.

I don't want to renew my faith. I want you to stand by me for assistance, so that I would be treated legally, the law of the Lord. Don't let me down.

One more thing that I want to share with you and I am going to hold you responsible for that.

Your records show that I was baptized in your Church in 1976. That was long before the Moslems started their war against the Shah. The good Lord didn't want me to get involved in that war and trusted me in the hands of your faith.

[REDACTED] at the college of Engineering Utah State University was instrumental to baptize me. I recall his most effective word.

He said, "In the day of the Judgment, we stand beside you. Bearing witness to our Lord Christ about you."

Now, I thin, my days of judgment on earth is coming. I want you to stand by me for assistance here on earth.

I know that at some time, both me and you have to stand for the Judgment by the Lord himself, but I want to see how you do it now, so that we know what is going to happen then.

I remember the song all my friends were singing right after I was baptized. It said.

Teach me guide me walk besides me. Tell me all I need to know. I am a child of God.

Teach me guide me walk beside me tell me all I need to know. I am a child of God. Isolated, lonely and in need of divine intervention.

with the help of a seer stone. It all began to sound less like a divine revelation and more like a publicity stunt. And what did it make of the "testimony" of the other witnesses to the gold plates, many of them members of Smith's family?

Mormon scholars shuddered at the thought. They agreed that if anyone could ever substantiate any of those dreadful rumors that Smith had actually confessed to money digging in a court of law, it would be catastrophic for the faithful. Said one Mormon scholar: "If any evidence had been in existence that Joseph Smith had used a seer stone for fraud and deception, and especially had he made this confession in a court of law as early as 1826, or four years before the Book of Mormon was printed, and this confession was in a court record, it would have been impossible for him to have organized the restored Church."

In fact, such a trial record had existed for some time, had even been reprinted in several nineteenth-century journals. But the Church claimed it was an early forgery, that no such trial had ever taken place. Then, on July 28, 1971, Wesley P. Walters, a Methodist minister from Marissa, Illinois, while rummaging around the records in the basement of the county jail in Norwich, New York, found two boxes of county bills from the early 1800s. There, in a bundle of bills from 1826, were the records of the court trial of "Joseph Smith, The Glass Looker" on March 20, 1826.

That left one Mormon scholar arguing desperately that the Joseph Smith in the 1826 trial record couldn't be the Joseph Smith, and praying that no new evidence turned up to prove him wrong.

Sometime between January 11 and January 14, 1983, Hofmann brought another document to Temple Square. This time, instead of stopping at Schmidt's office in the Historical Department, he went straight to Elder Durham's door. Durham took one look at the letter and marched Hofmann directly over to Gordon Hinckley's office in the First Presidency building and placed the letter on Hinckley's bare desk. It was addressed to Josiah Stowell and signed "Joseph Smith, Jr." The date: June 18, 1825. If nothing else, it was the earliest known writing of the Prophet.

As described by one associate, Hinckley was "no Mahatma Gandhi. No waves of spirituality emanated from his person. No one came away from meeting him claiming their faith had been renewed." He was, first, last, and always, a bureaucrat—cool, precise, difficult when necessary; diplomatic, even charming, when appropriate; extremely effective at cutting through red tape and getting the job done. He was also notoriously shrewd about people.

It is not only the Unabomber that you have in your American culture. It is also [redacted] who also was a serial killer, but for different purpose.

Now. The police is using a double standard. They have a fixation on me. They want to lure me to their own level. That is why they go and talk to people who are doing business with me in Utah and lead them to temptation.

It is a turkey call, they are hunting after me. They want to make me mad, then I react. and they get what they want. Sorry I am not going to play the game.

The book shows that the Church did it before. It is called behavior modification. The police in Utah needs modification.

You did it for [redacted] I know that I am not a high ranking member of the Church. But I know that you are going to do it for me, if you do not want to get the son of a bitch.

Police is considered armed forces. When I came to Utah, I was under the impression that in case I get attacked, I call the police. Sorry no one attacked me except police.

Now, I am attacked by the police. It is the other way around. You are going to have to keep your dogs on leash.

I am not making a threat. It is a promise. We will take our frustration out of the head of Missionaries overseas. Eyes for an eye. That is in the bible.

Call the police in Utah and tell them to back off. Once and for ever. I mean it. Back off.

60 Don Bell, a sixteen-year veteran of the Salt Lake City Police Department, was already in a bad mood. When it was decided that Pinnock had to be interviewed, one of the Mormon officers in the department had suggested that it be done with kid gloves. "These people are different," he said. "We have to treat them differently." Bell shot back, "This is a homicide investigation. We have people to talk to, we talk to them. We don't care if they're presidents of corporations, we don't care if they're ditch diggers." By itself, that exchange was enough to set him on edge. Then he called Pinnock's secretary.

"I'm sorry. Elder Pinnock's in the Temple."

"How long will he be there?"

"I don't know. Who is calling?"

"This is who is calling. I need to talk to him." The suggestion that Pinnock be given deferential treatment had riled him.

"Is there anything we can do for you?"

"No, there isn't. I need to talk to him."

Five minutes later, Bell's phone rang. But it wasn't Pinnock, it was Martell Bird, the head of Church Security. "Why don't you give me the message for Elder Pinnock," he suggested.

Bell was really feeling the fire now. "Because I don't want to give you the message. It has nothing to do with you. I want to talk to him. I can fit it around his schedule, if necessary. I'm sure he's busy. So am I. But I need to talk to him. If we have to do it at night, that's all right." He paused. Clearly, this guy needed a shove. "Maybe the easiest thing to do is to get an investigative subpoena and have it served."

He could hear Bird jump on the other end of the line. "Hold on! We don't need to do that."

Twenty minutes later, Pinnock called. "I have the whole afternoon free," he said, in his most sanctious voice. "I can see you any time you want."

"How about right now?"

"Beautiful."

(As Bell drove over to the First Presidency building, a delegation from Church Security, headed by Martell Bird, was paying a visit to Bell's superior, Police Chief Bud Willoughby, to let him know what they thought of Detective Don Bell's manners.)

Bell already knew from an interview at the First Interstate Bank that Pinnock had arranged a loan for Mark Hofmann. Now Pinnock claimed he didn't know Hofmann. Bell choked back his astonishment and tried again. "Do you know anything about the McLellan Collection and this man who was trying to sell it?"

"Well, wait a minute," said Pinnock, apparently catching the look on Bell's face. "I think I do."

Somebody was lying, thought Bell, either the people at First Interstate Bank or Hugh Pinnock. Bell laid bets it was Pinnock. Down at the Metropolitan Hall of Justice, that bet would have been worth a lot. In sixteen years as a policeman, Bell had earned a reputation as one of the best, if not the best interviewer, in the department. It was Bell who had cracked Arthur Gary Bishop, extracting, within twenty-four hours, confessions to a wave of murders of young boys that had paralyzed the city. As an interviewer, he was a legend. He certainly knew when he was being fed a line.

"The McLellan Collection?" Pinnock fumbled with the pronunciation and mused another moment. "I think I remember something about that. There was a guy who came here. Now, I know nothing about him myself, but I remember that some guy came in and said something about a collection. And I remember having to get up and walk down the hall and go into Elder Oaks's office. And I asked Elder Oaks, 'Are we interested in a 'McLellan Collection' or some kind of collection?' And he said, 'No. We're not buying anything. If the guy wants to donate something, that's fine.' And I came back and told the guy, 'If you want to donate something, that's fine.'"

Bell could hardly contain himself. Lies, especially when they came in great clumps like this, could be very entertaining. "You know," he said, "we have some information that Mr. Hofmann met with President Hinckley."

Pinnock leaned back in his chair, put his feet up on the desk, and brought his hands together in prayer position. "You have to understand something," he began, summing up all of the sanctimonious sonorities of his most patronizing tone. "People come into this building all the time. Then they leave this building, and they go and they talk to their friends. And they say, 'We've been down there visiting the First Presidency of the Church.' Or, 'We've been visiting President Hinckley.'"

"This is sort of what my job is. You see, the First Presidency of the Church doesn't have the time to just listen to people who come in off the street. So they steer the people in to me and I listen to their concerns, and I'm nice to them. Then, when they leave the building, they often go say they've been meeting with President Hinckley or something. Nine times out of ten, they've just seen somebody low down on the totempole like me."

Bell had been raised a Mormon, so he knew that was true. Not just anybody could walk into the offices of the First Presidency. Perhaps Hofmann had been bragging about the visits with Hinckley. But First Interstate wasn't bragging about the $185,000 loan. Bell had held the loan application in his own hands. There was no doubt in Bell's mind: Hofmann was lying, but so was Hugh Pinnock.

"I'm afraid that's about it," Pinnock concluded. "I wish I could give you more help. But I'm sure President Hinckley has never met this man. The whole situation is very sad. Isn't it awful? In fact, I did know Steve Christensen slightly. I was friends with Gary Sheets in college, and, of course, I know Mr. Mac."

Bell pursued the subject of Steve Christensen. Pinnock said that Steve had been involved in arranging a donation of "some documents" to the Church just before his death. The donor was a private collector in Canada, and Steve was supposed to authenticate the documents.

"What kind of documents?" Bell pressed.

"Oh, some letters from Joseph Smith, something like that. Al Rust of Rust's Coin Store was somehow involved. I believe he had put up some money on some of the documents. The documents were supposed to have been donated the day Steve was killed."

Bell knew backtracking when he heard it. Pinnock had apparently figured out that Bell was likely to uncover something about the transaction. Then he backtracked on Mark Hofmann.

"You know, that Mark Hofmann you mentioned? I think I now remember that on the 15th, his wife called my secretary and left a message saying he wanted to see me that afternoon to talk about some document collections. But we never had the appointment. There was no need to. After all, the Church wasn't interested in any collections." He was weaving an increasingly tangled web.

On his way to his car, Bell didn't doubt for a moment that he had been lied to. He only wanted to know why. Back at the department, he told a group of fellow officers about his conversation with Pinnock and other Church officials. "We've got some real problems," he said. "They're obviously stonewalling us. They're lying to us. I don't know what it is, but they're hiding something." Suddenly, one of the assistant chiefs, known to be a devout Mormon, slammed his hand down on his desk as hard as he could and leaped out of his chair. "I'm getting damned sick and tired of hearing they. They this, they that." Just who the hell is they?" And he continued to rant until someone took him aside and calmed him down. Everyone knew what his problem was—just as everyone knew who "they" was.

The minute Detective Bell left his office, Hugh Pinnock contacted the nearest lawyer, Dallin Oaks. It was only then that he found out Oaks had already spoken to Shannon Flynn.

61 Sometime before eleven that morning, Flynn had come looking for Hinckley. "I'm going over right now and talk to President Hinckley," he told Lyn Jacobs, who happened to be in the Church Here you see, the U. S. Attorney declared Salt Lake City the Capitol of the Fraud and Forgery of the earth.

I am sure you identify with that, because you are the one who had been sold the forged documents.

Please rest assured, you are not the only one who had been the victim of the fraud. I am the second victim.

In your case, because of your high ranking, the police helped you. In my case, because I was born in Iran, the police and the U. S. Attorney attacks me. The police and the U. S. Attorney is running a cover operation against me.

They are under estimating me. See, when we see a missionary in London. One could see, he is alone and you can do what you want. They don't know what is behind him.

Same here. They see me alone here, and they think they can do what they want and no one is going to check on them. They don't know what I have in my arsenal.

Take my words for it. The best thing for you to do is to stand by me, so that I don't have to use other people's help.

A hundred and fifty years later, the U.S. Attorney's Office declared Salt Lake City "the fraud capital of the nation." Between 1980 and 1983, the Utah U.S. attorney estimated that about ten thousand investors lost approximately $200 million in fraudulent deals. Many of them involved or implicated Church figures, even General Authorities. Scam artists had a name for it: "the Mormon marketing strategy." Any scheme, they discovered, no matter how outrageous or flimsy, would fly if it could be tied to the Church—What safer place to put one's money than in the hands of the Prophet? Investing money in a scheme that had the blessing of a General Authority was as good as handing it to the Lord.

So eager were many Mormon faithful to accumulate wealth (and blessings), and so trusting of Church leaders, that they would buy the Brooklyn Bridge—twice. Or better yet, "gold certificates" worth, according to the nice young Mormon man who sold them, a hundred or even a thousand times the up-front investment. When he was finally caught, the nice young man had unloaded $612 billion worth of bogus certificates—an amount equal to half the national debt. "What you have out here," says a local newspaper reporter, "is a bunch of people who are basically educated from birth to unquestioningly believe what they're told, and they do, right up through adulthood. The conditions for fraud are perfect." In 1981 alone, Utah was third in the nation for business-loan defaults and suffered eleven major business frauds. SEC officials labeled Salt Lake City "the sewer of the securities industry."

The Church finally had to take note of the stink when in the early 1980s, a member of the Church's elite found himself embroiled in a multimillion-dollar mortgage fraud. Believing that Elder Paul Dunn, a member of the First Quorum of the Seventy, had blessed the deal, hundreds of trusting Mormons had mortgaged their houses and given the proceeds to a Mormon entrepreneur named Grant Affleck who promised to invest their money, make their mortgage payments, and give them a substantial profit to boot. In his sales pitch, Affleck showed pictures of himself, Dunn, and some of the Osmonds cutting a ribbon at the opening of one of his housing developments.

Like most Ponzi schemes, Affleck's scam went smoothly as long as new money poured in, but as soon as the flow of gullible investors stopped, the whole pyramid collapsed, leaving many without their money and some without their homes.

Fortunately for the Church, Dunn had pulled out of the company

This one again. You see how people react in times of distress.

I have the probable cause to believe that the university President and her police puts me under distress because they want to have a bomb under her ass.

It is not going to be very difficult to make a bomb, put it in the school back pack and put it in one of those crowded classrooms. Many people are going to get killed and injured and that is going to balance the equation.

Sorry. I know what they have in mind. I am not going to play their games. Please tell them to go and find another sucker. Don't hunt for me.

It is not very difficult to put a bomb in Salt Lake city, when you have your General conference. We do also know that they are going to have an Olympic in Utah pretty soon.

These police officers are sick in the head. They make people mad, in order to draw reaction from them.

There you see, another man got mad, and went to shoot people. Perhaps that is what they want from me. I am not Mr. Abu Kamal.

This is what I want you to do. Get involved, and tell the University President and her police to go and jump on a hard cock. We read their mind. We are not going to fall on the trap.

I want you to get my records and take charge of my affairs.

Abortion foes claim Atlanta bombings

Letter says 'Army of God' is behind blasts at clinic, nightclubBy Gary Fields
USA TODAY

A shadowy group known for its stance against abortion has claimed responsibility for the bombings of an abortion clinic and a gay and lesbian nightclub in Atlanta.

The Army of God sent Reuters news agency a letter claiming responsibility for the device that exploded on the patio at the Otherside Lounge Friday, injuring five people. A second bomb was detonated by a remote-controlled robot.

Reuters, which received the letter Monday and turned it over to the FBI, reported that the letter contained details about the construction of the two bombs used in Friday's attack and the two bombs used in an attack last month at an Atlanta abortion clinic.

Seven people were hurt in the clinic blasts.

The letter set up a system to allow the group to confirm its part in future bombings. And, it promised total war against the federal government and more attacks against gays and lesbians and their supporters.

Federal officials said the letter was being taken seriously.

Authorities investigating the cases have said there are similarities among Friday's bombing in Atlanta's Centennial Olympic Park, and the Jan. 16 bombing outside a Sandy Springs abortion clinic.

In the two most recent incidents, second bombs filled with dynamite and nails were designed to catch law enforcement and emergency personnel coming to the scene.

Groups familiar with organizations opposed to abortion and hate groups said the Army of God is best known for publishing a manual that teaches abortion opponents how to use violence against clinics, including making and using bombs. Beyond that, little is known about the group or its membership.

The group was first heard of in 1981 when a Granite City, Ill., abortion doctor and his wife were kidnapped and held for a week by a group demanding that President Reagan denounce abortions. The group signed its letters Army of God.

Kathy Spillar, national coordinator of the Feminist Majority Foundation, said whoever sent the letter had enough knowledge to associate themselves with people who had used violence in the past. She also said the owner of the Otherside is the sister of one of the more vocal supporters of late-term abortions.

Others were not so sure about the letter's claim.

"We have to step back a second," said Brian Levin, director of the Center on Hate and Extremism at Stockton College in Pomona, N.J. "It's common for a right-wing group to not claim responsibility and let the deed do the talking."

USA TODAY

NEW YORK — Police say the Palestinian teacher who went on a shooting spree atop the Empire State Building carried a rambling note blaming the United States for using Israel against his people.

That seems to contradict his relatives, who said Monday the shooting wasn't politically motivated, but was connected to losing his life savings, more than $300,000.

Investigators aren't "precluding anything," New York Police Commissioner Howard Safir said, but so far had found no evidence linking Ali Hassan Abu Kamal, 69, to any terrorist group.

One man was killed and six others wounded before Abu Kamal shot and killed himself. One victim remained in critical condition Monday. The others were in serious but stable condition.

In Abu Kamal's hometown of Gaza City, relatives said they didn't know how he lost his savings but that it appeared to have caused him to snap. "I think a man that age cannot accept that he loses more than $300,000 after 50 years of work," son-in-law Marwan Abu Samra said.

Abu Kamal was known as a stern teacher, who dressed in expensive suits in the impoverished Gaza Strip. He worked in city schools and as a private tutor for wealthy Gazans.

One of his students, Associated Press reporter Ibrahim Barzak, called him "the best English tutor in Gaza" and said he could charge $15 per hour, more than twice the going rate.

Abu Kamal's relatives said he came to the USA to invest his money and eventually wanted to move his family here.

Another son-in-law, Ramez Dahshan, doubted Abu Kamal had political motives and said Abu Kamal himself was the victim of Islamic militants. In 1992, he was kidnapped by followers of the Hamas group and beaten. Graffiti by the group accused Abu Kamal of smoking hashish, drinking alcohol and violating Islamic law.

Abu Kamal arrived in New York from Cairo on Christmas Eve. On Jan. 11, he checked into a $150-a-week efficiency apartment in a motel in Melbourne, Fla. There, he was remembered as a kind but befuddled old man who occasionally stood naked outside his room.

Abu Kamal: Said to have lost savingsBy Mary Lou Henderson, AP Survivor's story: Hector Mendez, 35, heard the gunshots and shouted to his 9-year-old daughter,
'Go inside! Go!' He was shot in the thigh.

"I told him, 'Papa you can't do that. That's not cool,'" said Gary Gregory, owner of the River Oaks Motel. He "chased" the maid out when he made some advances to her. I told him that wasn't appropriate. After I talked to him, he stopped."

Gregory also said Abu Kamal told him he was trying to establish Florida residency to buy a gun, which he got Feb. 4. Then he left, saying he wanted to see the USA and was going to New York, Gregory said. He thought of him as "some sweet old grandpa out to see the world." But he recalled asking, "Pop, you aren't one of those terrorists are you?" He gave me a cutting look and muttered something and went on. It was a dirty look."

On Sunday, Abu Kamal's relatives said, he called his wife to say he couldn't afford to send tuition to a son studying engineering in Russia. He wouldn't explain his financial problems. Later, witnesses say, he took the elevator to the 86th floor of the Empire State Building, muttered something about Egypt, and opened fire with a .380-caliber Beretta semiautomatic handgun.

"It was his dream," son-in-law Abu Samra said, "to live in the States because he felt he wanted to be in a place where people would understand him."

Here. I use this as an example:

People react differently under distress. In this part of the hemisphere, when the police gets out of line. People go and shoot them to death.

I went o the office of the FBI in Salt Lake City. There the names of people hanging on the wall. Those who have lost their lives in line of duty.

Sons of the bitches. They make people mad. People shoot them to death. hanging their picture on the wall. Sons of the bitches.

No one have a reason to shoot any one of us to death in line of duty. We don't attack people. We don't steal from people. Your police do. I don't put people under distress. you police do.

Now, you see what is waiting on the curve of the river. The police in Utah is bothering with me. They put me under distress.

This is what they get in return. I am not going to react to them. That is why I am calling upon you for assistance.

Tell the police to go to hell.

The following investigation was conducted by Special Agent (SA) [redacted] of the Salt Lake City Division of the FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION (FBI):

On July 14, 1997, [redacted] for the University of Utah President's Office, 201 South President's Circle, Number 203, Salt Lake City, Utah 84112-9008, [redacted] was interviewed regarding communications with subject [redacted]

According to [redacted] she and [redacted] answer all of the incoming calls directed to the office of [redacted]

[redacted] stated that the first communication she recalls coming from [redacted] was a large manilla envelope containing sever dozen bills sent from the U of U and/or a collection agency in attempts to collect [redacted] $24,000.00 student loan. The bills were accompanied by a letter from [redacted] requesting her help in settling his account. The letter contained information regarding [redacted] being accused of being the [redacted] from the U of U. The letter, envelope and contents were referred to the U of U Chief of Police, ROBERT B. WILSON, Junior. {A copy of the police report was obtained from the UNIVERSITY OF UTAH POLICE DEPARTMENT. That report indicated that the package was received on May 15, 1997.)

According to [redacted] received a second letter a few days later (dated May 15, 1997,) a copy of which is attached. This letter was also referred to Chief ROBERT WILSON.

[redacted] stated that on approximately May 21, 1997, she received a telephone call [redacted] inquiring whether his of his letters had arrived. He asked how long it would be before he might expect a response. [REDACTED] she did not know. However, she stated that she was waiting for the UNIVERSITY OF UTAH POLICE DEPARTMENT to advise the President's Office on how to deal with [REDACTED] to have his student loans forgiven. [REDACTED] demeanor was polite and business like.

Shortly after this first telephone call, the UNIVERSITY OF UTAH POLICE DEPARTMENT indicated that the best tactic would be to not discuss the issue with him and to not engage him in any kind of defensive conversation.

[REDACTED] provided a copy of U of U correspondence regarding this telephone call, also attached.

On May 30, 1997, [REDACTED] telephoned a second time asking whether [REDACTED] was going to respond to his letters. [REDACTED] would probably not respond. [REDACTED] hung up. Notes from that conversation, as well as a dictated report and a memorandum issued by [REDACTED] regarding [REDACTED] telephone calls, dated May 30, 1997, are attached.

[REDACTED] stated that on July 7, 1997, the President's Office received a third letter [REDACTED] This communication consisted of a one-page handwritten cover sheet and two-page typed letter. None of these documents were signed, however, the return address on the envelope indicated it was from [REDACTED] [REDACTED] Seattle, Washington [REDACTED]

A fourth communication was received on July 11, 1997, and consisted of a single page, unsigned letter. Attached was a three page article entitled, "The Bomb is in the Mail", an article about the UNABOMER from the May 8, 1995 edition of TIME MAGAZINE.

According to [REDACTED] both of the July 7 and July 11, 1997 letters were turned over to officers of the UNIVERSITY OF UTAH POLICE DEPARTMENT. A copy of each letter and the corresponding police report is attached.

PRESIDENT'S OFFICE

Dear [redacted]

Perhaps you received my letter dated May 13, 1997. Please God, that by now, you have my file at the University Police in your own office. That is a smart thing to do. Get those files in your own office.

It has been almost ten thousand years that those Mormons, never put a female in charge of anything. I was so surprised, I could not believe what I heard, but it is true

I have been out of Utah for many years. I would like to know more about you, because I want to know how to approach you. Please tell me more about yourself, and how you want to be addressed.

I am so pleased, that little [redacted], bastard, received dishonorable discharge, that no one could imagine. He deserved it.

b6
b7C

He expelled me. I didn't deserve that. I am a very hard working, and good student. His action hurt a lot of other people.

I expect you to be very bright, and open minded. More important than that, I demand you to be very honest with me. I am going to be honest, and truthful with you.

That UNABOMBER, hurt a lot of people. We must repair the damages. I need your help. We have to get the records straight.

An update on the [redacted] situation. Sgt [redacted] came by the office and picked up the most recent letter. After reading the letter [redacted] explained that you were concerned about the escalating hostility in the letters. Sgt [redacted] indicated that he would turn the information over to Chief Wilson when he returned to Public Safety. Chief Wilson will then consult with [redacted] about an appropriate response.

MEMORANDUM

DATE: May 30, 1997

TO: Park Building Administrative Staff

FROM: [REDACTED]

Subject: [REDACTED] Telephone Calls

The Office of the President has been receiving letters from a man named [REDACTED] [REDACTED] for the past few weeks. He evidently has a history with the University of Utah and hasn't been heard from since the early 1980s. We were hoping that by not responding to his letters, he would cease his activities. Unfortunately, this approach was unsuccessful. He called our office this morning and indicated that he would like a response to his concerns.

At present, we are working with the Campus Police on this issue. If he calls your office, please document the time and date, and write a brief description of what was said. Do not engage him in a dialogue. If he asks to speak with someone, please tell [REDACTED] that he/she is in a meeting, and report any calls to Campus Police; let them know your report is in reference to Case Number 97-21646. We suspect [REDACTED] will continue to call only our office, but he may try another approach once he doesn't get a response from us.

 called this morning wanting to know whether you would be responding to his letters of the last few weeks. I told him I did not know of a response but that I would check on it. I then called campus police and reported it to them. An officer came over and took a statement from me on the incident. The officer indicated that Chief Wilson would prepare a response.

The officer suggested that I prepare a memo for the other staff members on the floor so that they know how to respond if he calls again. I am drafting a memo and will get your approval before sending out to the other offices.

The Details are as follows:

The complainant in this case, [redacted] As such, she has received letters and phone calls from [redacted] in which [redacted] sites examples such as the unabomber, the hostage taking in Iran, the riots resulting from the Rodney King trial, Timothy McVeigh's bombing of the Oklahoma federal building and Charles Whitmore (?). He also wrote in the latest letter, "You don't have to beat around the margin to make a Timothy J. McVeigh or Theodore J. Kaczynski out of me." He also wrote in this same letter, "With one strike, one can out perform both Tim and Ted combined. All it takes is one avenging angel to balance the equation."

All of [redacted] communications seem to be motivated by his anger at being expelled from the University of Utah and the requirement that he repay his $24,031.70 in student loans that have been turned over to C.S.C. Credit Services for collection.

It appears from the post mark on the envelope that [redacted] used in his latest communication that He is living in Seattle, Washington at this time.

I picked up the letters that [redacted] sent to [redacted] This was on 7-9-97 at 0900 hours. I placed the documents into evidence on 7-9-97 at 1000 hours. They were in my possession from the time I got them from [redacted] until I put them into evidence. [redacted] told me that [redacted]

[redacted] had handled the letters and the envelope. The letters consist of one hand written letter, one two page typed letter and a copy of a letter to [redacted] from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. This case will be reviewed by the FBI to see if they need to be involved.

No!

It didn't die away for over a decade
It is not going to die away now.

Your best bet is to do what I say!

May 30, 1997

You don't have to speak to let the people know about you. Persians are very quick to tell the females. We tell if she is married, if she is looking for a date, if she is a prostitute. Woman doesn't have to talk, we know by the way she conducts herself.

You didn't answer my letters dated May 13, and 15. I called your office, and [redacted] said that you decided not to answer, because police silenced you. Your silence speaks. You smell like a prostitute. You are an adulator, a hooker, and a Prostitute. Only criminals and prostitute take the fifth, remain silence take order and deal with police.

That [redacted] bastard expelled me from school, and thought he cured everything. No! No one got anything out of it. I had a lot of money, time and energy invested in that effort. I can't let a Mormon Motherfucker tamper with my investment career, and future.

Ted Kaczynski. Look at the balance sheet. Three people are dead. One faculty lost his hand, another lost an eye to bomb. Now the government asked to put their own son on the electric chair. I feel sorry for you, and the situation you are in. You suckers hang yourself with your own rope.

With your silence and the tricks of the trade, you want to lure me in the same position as they lured Ted J. Kaczynski. There is a book about Ted Kaczynski, called Mad Genius. You want to make me mad, to become another Man Genius. That is why I call you a hooker. Find another sucker. Because I am not going to react to you. I am not one of your typical Johns. You will end up putting another American on electric chair for creating the temptation.

Last time your ancestors created problems with us, the students lost their temper, stormed the embassy, took the diplomats hostage in Tehran. Bite Uncle Sam in the ass, like a bull dog, and keep on chewing.

The military went to rescue the hostages. Eight solders burned to death in rescue attempt and the military came back empty handed. At the end, students got what they wanted.

I am not going to let you harvest the fruit of wickedness very easily. Pull your head out of your ass. Most wars are lost long before they are started. The day [redacted] expelled me, the school lost the war. I quit!. Never work another day in my life, pending outcome.

Motherfucking Mormons put me through a lot of trouble.. Therefore, the sooner you give me satisfaction, the better off you are. Cut your Losses short, and do what I want.

I wrote and said that I don't owe the student loan. I wanted to solve the problem in a friendly manner, because I thought people made mistakes. Everyone makes mistakes. You ignored me. That means it is deliberate, and not a mistake.

Now I am not going to pay off the student loan, no matter what the cost or consequences may be. I am going to ask for refund, for the amount of time and effort. You continue to ignore me, and I am going to ask for punitive damages. Still continue doing that, other students are going to get into the action and give you feedback.

Remember, that when the courts find the police officers not guilty in beating Mr. Rodney King. The King didn't have to do anything. The black people set Los Angeles on friendly fire. Same thing here, I am not without friends.

My transcript shows that I was a Civil Structural Engineer student. I went to school to build for America. It is difficult and time consuming to build. It takes five years to build, but a few seconds to destroy. Civil Engineer is called C. E. the abbreviation fits for Combat Engineer also. It is very easy to destroy. The day [redacted] expelled me, he wanted a Combat Engineer after his ass. I didn't go to another school, as he wrote me to do. No one is going to push me around. I know how to fight. I never back off from a fight. I am not a push over. You can punish me at your own expense.

b7c

It took Timothy J. McVeigh a fraction of a second to blast away the Federal Building. The government paid millions to obtain permission to execute their own most favorite son. I feel sorry for you. I really do. You don't have to beat around the margin to make a Timothy J. McVeigh, or Theodore J. Kaczynski out of me. Just be level with me, ask for punishment, and that can be arranged. With one strike, one can out perform both Tim and Ted combined. All it takes is one avenging angel to balance the equation.

The day I was expelled, I didn't study to build for America, I couldn't. That is called the opportunity lost. The school had the opportunity to train me to build. That is what I paid for and invested my time in it. It was the school duty to train and teach me. The school didn't do their part of the bargain.

Now that you know I am a victim. I give you a chance to repair the damages, but you ignore me and refuse. That means you are asking for punishment. all this time, I started to study how to get even. [redacted] punished without hearing me, therefore, I must return the favor, and punish.

Come back to your senses, wake up. Look at the letter, even your dead prophet regrets it. Pay for your mistakes, and stop the butchery. Remember Charles withmore!

Dear [REDACTED]

I have been asked to acknowledge your letter dated July 7, 1988, to [REDACTED] and to say that your comments and concerns have been noted.

Regarding the allegations you made against a member of the Church, I have been asked to explain that it is not feasible for the Church to become involved in civil matters of this sort. Therefore, you may wish to obtain the services of an attorney if you feel a legal judgment is due you. The allegations, if accurate, are certainly regrettable particularly because the gospel encourages individuals to be honest and charitable.

I also have been asked to express regret at the other difficulties you say you have had and to extend best wishes to you. [REDACTED]

Forget those that Mr. Unabomber killed for revenge and in anger. You and Unabomber deserve each other. Forgive him for those he killed in the past, but don't forget that he killed your colleague. Look at the balance sheet.

With me, you are planting the same seeds to harvest the same fruit in future. You push them to their limits, making them angry, people respond with bombs and bullets. You take away what belongs to them, then people respond with bombings. I suggest you don't turn on your tricks on me. I am not one of your Johns.

Persians have a word for people like you. It is pronounced, (Mishnasamet). It means I know you, I know what you have in mind. I know the mode of your operation. You are a hooker. You want to adulator me!

If I was not expelled from school. I would have had all the education I wanted by now. I would have paid my student loan back, with honesty and dignity that I deal with everyone else. You would not have a person who refuses to repay his loan, and have claim against in return.

Sorry!. I am not going to pay my student loan back. What you do now, is going to come back to people in future. I want justice.

You are going the wrong way. This way, for the years to come, is going to lead to the same town that Theodore John Kaczynski traveled. Wasting all your resources, in order to hung yourself with your own rope. Mr. Kaczynski hit the bottom now, but that is not the end of it.

The day I was expelled from school, I stopped everything. The buck stops here, I said. [redacted] wrote me and wanted me to go to another school. No!, I said, and I didn't work a day in my life. I am not going to be pushed over.

The motherfucker, [redacted] was an incompetent bastard. You are worse than him. He was not a prostitute, you are. I don't know, who in the hell put you in charge of school, but, there are many dumb people in Utah. They have birth defects. That cock sucker expelled me from school without even let me talk. You bitch refuse to answer my letter.

I tell you the right way to handle it. You pay off my student loan from the Presidents fund and say you are sorry the way I was treated. That shows you start to deal with me, in good faith. Then when I see you are moving in the right direction, I give you better direction.

No! Don't go in fighting mood with me. Don't get your ass in fight with the horn of a cow, the strength of materials in the horn is stronger, and the horn is sharp. It is going to tear your ass up in parts, and one may end up bleeding in the ass for every.

Don't make me wait for an ass like you. Remember, both Unabomber, and [redacted] hit the bottom. You will get your turn also.

The Bomb Is In the Mail

The mysterious Unabomber strikes again. But for the first time in 17 years, he wants to explain why

By MICHAEL D. LEMONICK

IF THE RECEPTIONIST AT THE CALIFORNIA Forestry Association office in Sacramento hadn't had so much trouble opening the shoebox-size package that arrived in the mail last Monday, she would now be dead. She survives only because she carried the box in to her boss, the organization's president, Gilbert Murray, and left it with him. He started to unwrap it—and the package blew up in his hands. The blast, which killed Murray, 47, instantly, was powerful enough to knock two doors off their hinges and blow gashes into the ceiling panels. And it was loud enough to be heard for blocks around, sending hundreds of workers into the streets in fear and bewilderment. Their panic was easy to understand: the Oklahoma City bombing had taken place just five days earlier.

But this was a different, more insidious brand of terror. While the bomb that destroyed the Murrah federal building was massive and crude, the device sent through the Sacramento mail was small and carefully put together—and designed to blow away a specific human target. It bore the telltale signs of a mysterious terrorist who has been eluding law-enforcement agencies for nearly two decades, in the longest-running unsolved serial-bombing case in FBI history. Soon a letter sent by the culprit to the New York Times confirmed what investigators feared: Murray was the latest victim of the shadowy figure the FBI calls Unabom, or the Unabomber.

Until last week, nobody had more than a vague idea of the motives behind the Unabomber's other 15 attacks, which have killed two and injured 22 over a span of 17 years. The targets have generally been scientists or others—a computer-store owner, a United Airlines president—who were somehow involved with technology: the first few bombings were directed at universities and airlines (thus the "un" and the "a" in the FBI's code name). That led investigators to suspect that their quarry, presumably a man, had some sort of anti-technology grudge.

The letter to the Times makes it clear that they were right—that the Unabomber, like the right-wing extremists believed to be responsible for the Oklahoma City blast, views terror as a way to fight what he sees as a pernicious trend in modern society. Just as the right-wingers fear intrusive government, the Unabomber evidently has a big problem with the Industrial Revolution and all that came out of it. "Through our bombings," says the letter,

"we hope to promote social instability in industrial society, propagate anti-industrial ideas and give encouragement to those who hate the industrial system."

The "we" refers to "the terrorist group FC." While refusing to specify the size of the group "for security reasons," the writer describes its members as "anarchist" and "radical environmentalist." Investigators, however, believe FC is merely the invention of a lone fanatic.

Whether a loner or not, the Unabomber clearly craves attention and publicity. Complaining in his letter that "it's no fun having to spend all your evenings and weekends preparing dangerous mixtures" and "filing trigger mechanisms out of scraps of metal," the Unabomber offers "a bargain." The campaign of terror will

—FROM A LETTER WRITTEN TO THE NEW YORK TIMES

KILLER AND VICTIM: The FBI sketch, left, shows the murderer as he appeared in 1987; Gilbert Murray died because he was a prominent lobbyist for the timber industry end, he says, if the Times or another nationally prominent publication, such as Time or Newsweek, publishes a long tract explaining the group's ideas.

That proposal created an immediate dilemma for the publications: Should they publish the material and possibly save lives or refuse to surrender their pages to a terrorist? Both Newsweek and TIME declined to say what they might do, and Times publisher Arthur Sulzberger Jr. released a noncommittal statement. "We'll take a careful look at it," he said, "and make a journalistic decision about whether to publish it in our pages." Bob Guccione, publisher of Penthouse, OMNI and other magazines, had no such hesitation. "I would do it in an instant," he said, offering not only to print the manuscript, but also to put the full weight of his company's public-relations machinery into making sure it is widely read. "This is the philosophical ramblings of a tortured mind. We'll print it exactly the way he wants it."

That might make interesting reading and sell plenty of magazines, but crime experts doubt that publishing the treatise would stop the bombings. Asks James Alan Fox, dean of the criminal-justice college at Northeastern University: "Since when did serial killers start telling the truth?" Even if the Unabomber's demand is met, the letter says, he reserves the right to commit "sabotage" against property as opposed to "terror" against human beings.

If nothing else, the letter to the Times and three more letters—one to victim David Gelernter, a Yale computer scientist seriously injured in a 1993 blast, and the other two to potential targets whose names are being kept secret—have given investigators their best clues yet. An additional 100 agents were quickly added to the 30-person, San Francisco-based Unabom task force run jointly by the FBI, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the post office.

Set up in 1993 after the explosion at Yale and one that had taken place in California two days earlier, the task force has had only the tiniest scraps of evidence to go on. In 1987 a witness spotted someone leaving what proved to be a bomb outside a computer store in Salt Lake City, Utah, and helped police produce a composite sketch of a white man, now in his 40s, about 6 ft. tall, with light hair, a moustache and glasses. Nearly two years ago, the bomber sent a brief, cryptic note to the Times in which he described himself only as an "anarchist." Besides the sketch of the Unabomber and his letters, just about the only clues are the locations of his attacks, the identities of his targets and the fragments of his trademark bombs.

That evidence leads investigators to suspect that the Unabomber may be based in Northern California: he has placed bombs in Sacramento and Berkeley; last week's letters and bomb were all mailed from Oakland; and he used a Sacramento State University faculty member's name on a 1993 bomb's return address. Moreover, the Times letter refers to "searching the sierras" for bomb-testing sites. But while he's clearly familiar with the territory, says FBI special agent Jim Freeman, who heads the joint task force, that "doesn't necessarily mean he lives or works in this area."

To construct a psychological profile of the terrorist, investigators have tried to figure out his motives and how he thinks. In particular, they have studied his choice of targets and bomb-making style, which has always been quirky and meticulous. The Unabomber's devices are generally handcrafted, with many parts, including tiny levers, carved from wood. FBI forensics experts have found everything from scrap wood to pieces of mahogany and other hardwoods used in furniture. One bomb contained a twig from a cherry tree. The bomber makes some of his own metal parts too, including pins and even screws. Then the whole thing is generally placed in a homemade wooden box before being mailed or delivered.

TIME Graphic by Steve Hart

"If you'd had any brains you would have realized that there are a lot of people out there who resent bitterly the way techno-nerds like you are changing the world and you wouldn't have been dumb enough to open an unexpected package from an unknown source."

FROM A LETTER WRITTEN TO THE PROFESSOR DAVID GELERENTER

SURVIVOR

Gelerenter's crime was doing advanced research into powerful computers—anathema to a technology-hating terrorist who wants to promote social instability

According to former FBI bomb expert James Ronay, who worked on the case for years, the Unabomber's extraordinary attention to detail points to an obsessive personality. Says Ronay: "If the bomber were only interested in producing a bomb that worked efficiently, he could do it a lot more easily. It's more of an uncontrollable urge to tinker with this thing as much as possible." It also suggests a loner: nobody could easily keep up much of a social life while building and testing such intricate contraptions. And because his first devices were relatively unsophisticated, the FBI and other agencies believe he has no formal training with high explosives. Says Ronay: "These bombs are in a lot of ways Neanderthal, but every one of them worked."

No one disputes the Unabomber's intelligence. The Times letter was "better written than those of some of my students," says James Hill, head of the Sacramento State chemistry department, whose name was in the return address on the 1993 mail bomb. And the steady progress in making his devices more sophisticated points to a remarkable self-education in pyrotechnics.

Apparently impressed with himself, the Unabomber delights in taunting his hapless adversaries. "It doesn't appear that the FBI is going to catch us any time soon," he writes in his letter to the Times. "The FBI is a joke." And to Gelerenter, who lost part of a hand, the vision in one eye and the hearing in one ear when the mail bomb exploded, the bomber writes, "If you'd had any brains you would have realized that there are a lot of people out there who resent bitterly the way techno-nerds like you are changing the world and you wouldn't have been dumb enough to open an unexpected package from an unknown source."

It may have been ego that triggered the Unabomber's latest attack. Says Michael Rustigan, professor of criminology at San Francisco State University: "I think all the publicity given to the Oklahoma City bombing has stirred him up. It would be reasonable to say he feels upstaged and a little bit jealous."

WHAT SET THE UNABOMBER OFF IN the first place? Experts suspect he had some sort of conflict early in his career, perhaps in college or on the job, and probably with someone involved in computer science. As a result, speculates Rustigan, "he probably disconnected himself and withdrew and started brooding," like most serial killers. His feelings about computers may have led the Unabomber to adopt the initials FC—they could stand for "f--- computers," say investigators—which he has etched into parts of most of his bombs and which were scrawled on Sacramento State University buildings just before the 1993 attacks.

As time went on, he may have broadened his hatred to include not just computer scientists but all of industrial society, and embraced a pro-environment, back-to-the-woods philosophy. That could explain his obsession with using wood in his bombs and last week's targeting of the California Forestry Association, which represents logging companies. And in the Times letter, the Unabomber declares that last December's murder of Thomas Mosser, a former executive with the Burson-Marsteller public-relations firm, was in protest against the company's representing Exxon, whose oil tanker fouled Alaska's Prince William Sound in the great oil spill of 1989.

Unfortunately for investigators, none of this information necessarily brings them closer to catching the Unabomber. That may not happen, they say, until he makes some sort of mistake. He's already blundered in small ways—the bomb that killed the California Forestry Association's Murray was addressed to a predecessor who retired a year ago. And a couple of bomb attempts over the years have been unsuccessful.

Or it may be his newfound taste for publicity that will do the Unabomber in. The Times letter claims that the emergence from obscurity has come about because "we now have something serious to say." It may actually mean that the Unabomber can no longer content himself with lingering in the shadows and wants more recognition for his cleverness. Says Fox: "He's feeling invincible, that he's superior to law enforcement and can forever outsmart the police. Hopefully that's what will be his downfall." The more often he goes public, the more likely it is that he will unwittingly provide the joint task force with a crucial bit of information needed to track him down.

But the Unabomber could easily strike again, more than once, before this happens—and he suggests the attacks could become more devastating. "We expect," he writes, "we will be able to pack deadly bombs into ever smaller, lighter and more harmless looking packages. On the other hand, we believe we will be able to make bombs much bigger than any we've made before. With a briefcase-full or a suitcase-full of explosives we should be able to blow out the walls of substantial buildings."

That is an ominous statement coming after the destruction of the Murrah building in Oklahoma City. The authorities' greatest fear is that the Unabomber may want to prove his prowess. If he felt inspired and challenged by the Oklahoma bombing, the search for the serial killer has become all the more urgent. —Reported by Jordan Bonfante/Sacramento, J. Howard Green/San Francisco, Jenifer Mattos/New York and Elaine Shannon/Washington

Here you see, President Hinckley is defined as very effective Administrator. I do recall him from my days in Utah State University. He used to come and talk to us and promote Missionary work. I like him. I am on his side. Cooperate with him

Missionary work means a lot to him. People are not going to disturb that holy work, if you are not going to deal with me with bad faith. Most people in Utah believe in him. I know that most Judges pray to his father in heaven before they go to bench. That carries a lot of weight.

On the other hand, most people in Utah, let their loved ones to come under our mercy, to preach the gospel to us. Verily, verily I say this unto you. You don't want to make any one of us mad, that we may not use any of the Missionaries to bring you under the negotiation table.

They used the U. S. diplomats in Tehran for negotiation, with the Fight House. They can use the Mormons for negotiation with you. They have done it before, they will do it again. That time they won the game, this time they will win again.

I loved [redacted] He said, "Forget about the Bible and what is in it. It is old and obsolete." He was the living and walking Bible, he claimed, one should listen to him instead of reading the Bible. Here again, call the office of the First Presidency and pray for guidance. The Lord is going to guide you to the right path.

Remember separation of Church and State. The Church comes first. Without God, there would be no government. With God, and the Church on your side, you should not be listening to a handful of fucking police officers.

If you want to talk business, call the Dean of the College of Business Administration. He will tell you the most profitable decision is to listen to me. I am happy, then you are happy.

No one with his right mind is going to listen to police officers, or even talk to them. Only a no brain female like you will call or listen to police. We men, never dial 911.

We take care of business in a very smooth and professional manner. Most of the time with a hand shake. When we walk out of the negotiation room, we tip a few dollars to the police officers standing at the door.

Next time that I contact you, I don't want to hear that police had a comment in my affairs. This is not a Police State that we let the police run the show. Stay away from police.

Your best choice is to talk to the dean of the College of Business, and the office of First Presidency for counsel, but not the police. No one with the brain is going to join the police force.

Do what President Gordon B. Hinckley wants.

Stop Playing

Mother fuckers!

Here. You see, how Hugh Pinnock dealt with the police officers. I got this copy from the book called Mormon Murders. It is not fiction. It is a true story. The police needs a shove.

The bomb that killed Steve Christensen went off under my own chair. It was an eye opener. I worked in the same building the same day, and I heard the bomb went off. I believe the good Lord wanted me to know what I was dealing with Mormons murders and killers.

Please keep your fraud, forgery, deceit, bombs, bullets, police, murder, and silence for yourself and your own people. I am just a foreigner, came to school to earn an education, and get out. I didn't come here to get tangled in the web of your criminal activities Murder and police work.

I have asked President Hinckley to modify the police behavior in your areas. I pray that he would be successful and we don't have to deal with your brutal police any more. However, you may want to play your cards smart. Do what I tell you to do, so that I do not have to go through the extra miles to rub it in. Don't let any work for him.

One way or the other, if it is going to be through Lawyers and Courts, if it is going to be through Senators and Congressmen, if it is going to be through the Lord and his Church, if it is going to be with bombs and bullets, fire and arson. The University is going to submit to the truth. Take it easy and be truthful!

For over a decade the University and police had been playing a game with me. It is time to stop wickedness. Now, it is you. You are going to stop on your initiative, or someone have to pull the breaks on you.

You have seen the tip of the iceberg. You see me alone, and you think I am isolated, and you can do everything you want. You have not seen anything yet. You don't see what I have in my arsenal to fight.

I don't think the University have the right to treat people the way you treat me. Once we let you do it and get way with it, you are going to do it to everyone else. Stop shitting all over me and yourself.

It didn't get you anything for over a decade. It is not going to get you, or anyone else anything, expect death and destruction in future. It is not a few thousand dollars students loan that I am after. You and your police are doing me wrong, and that have to be stopped.

Honesty is best policy. Be level and honest with us, and we don't have to go through any of this. We don't have to silence the police. We don't have to be nasty to you. we don't even have to do anything with you, or any of your motherfucking Mormon breed.

I don't want to waste my time writing you, but you don't let me.

In order to be good at fraud and forgery, you must cheat yourself first.

If that wouldn't expell me without probable cause, here, a decade later, you would not have this in your plate.

You would have a well educated person, with a good job, who paid his student loan back and treated you with honesty.

Now you cock suckers, have to eat what cooked for you.

You think you are going to remain silent, and it is going to fade away. No!

You have to pay for your crime!

Here, you see that Salt Lake City is called the Capital of the Fraud and Forgery of the earth. With that reputation, you don't need to try to defraud me. We know your tricks of the trade. Your condition of fraud are perfect. It all comes back to you.

I still have my friends in Utah. If you try to cheat me. They are going to feed you all the bull shit in return. Others from all over the world, are going to shove all the fraud and forgery in your ass with the prod rod so that you never dream of cheating me again.

You may go to police, but they can't do anything about it. You may go to the hospital, but the doctors can't do anything about it. You may go to the Lord, but he had never helped a person in your situation in the past.

Don't pull the police on me. I didn't come to school to get engaged with police activities. Police wants to say something, you say it for them. You don't have the right to remain silent. I want answers, and I want them quick.

Next time the police tells you not to answer my letters. You go to bed with them for bribe and fuck them up for bribe. Then go and have mutual bowl movement. You don't need to violate my rights and hide behind police.

I already know what they have in my files. It only took me fifty dollars bribe money to get everything about me, in their files. All they want to do is to create bottle neck, and make some money on the side, and you are helping the corrupt bastards.

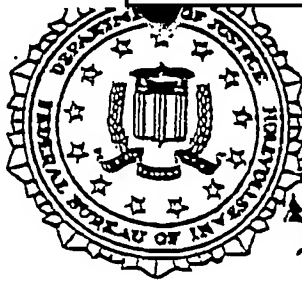

Keep in mind, that I make sure it is not going to end up a good deal for you or any other person for that matter. Stop playing games with me. Stop silence and red tape. You motherfucker should know better that, but you don't. Do my job very quick and before everyone else.

The day after I was expelled from school, I didn't work a day in my life waiting for my turn. It is been more than ten years, but I am not going to give up. It cost the government hundreds of thousands of dollars to tangle with me.

If I was at work; that would have been millions of dollars to the benefit of the government, but I didn't. It is called double jeopardy. I don't work in one hand, on the other hand they start wasting their money to tangle with me. A few thousand dollars of student loan are negligible.

Meanwhile, Unabomber kept bombing and killing. When you bother with me, I believe you want to have a bomb in your ass. Well, sorry: If you want a bomb under your ass, you go to the Unabomber. If you want a cock into your ass, you go to San Francisco. it is called the Capitol of gays and lesbians of the world. They will take care of your ass.

With me, you have to deal honest, and straight.

May 2, 1997

Honorable Barbara Boxer
U. S. Senate

Dear Senator Boxer:

Senator Patty Murray did her job. Look at the letter she obtained from the FBI headquarters. It is time for other Senators to share the work.

The FBI had been supplied with a Unabomber lead. Look at the confirmation letter from the Reader's Digest. It took only one month for the L. A. P. D. To arrest the Cosby murderer. That lead was provided by the Enquirer.

First checked the lead that is supplied to you, through the Reader's Digest, if it didn't pan out, then go and offer a million dollar reward.

I didn't know what Mr. Freeh was up to, when he offered the reward in December 16, 1993. Eye to Eye with Connie Chung. Perhaps he wanted to charm Connie!

I am the fifth victim. Look at the copy of the case, advertised by the FBI. It doesn't take a Genius to know that it was a bait. The FBI swallowed the bait.

The FBI never admits that I was their suspect for almost a decade. They sweep it under the rugs. That is a shame.

In Utah, I was treated as if [REDACTED] but the hostility still continues. Perhaps Mr. Freeh thins it is his birth right to steal from people.

Mr. Freeh is covering up the truth. The letter to Senator Patty Murray doesn't say anything about how they treated me. Mr. Freeh knows what the FBI did.

The field agents are excused to make mistakes, but they are hundred percent guilty. Mr. Freeh on the other hand, doesn't have that luxury. He doesn't have the right to make mistakes. He is one thousand percent responsible.

The lead provided to them by they Reader's Digest. They are trying to sweep it under the rugs, but we don't let them.

People died, because the Task Force wanted to keep the case going, and milk the case. They wasted seventy-five million on the job. That is theft.

Perhaps this is a good case for the U. S. Department of Justice Inspector General, to look into.

The FBI had their Laboratory reports inspected, and report was failure. Other cases are coming up. It is time to go public with it. People are paying with their blood for the sins of the FBI.

The Time in their April 28, 1997 have another article about the FBI. They call Mr. Freeh Dr. Kevorkian. Dr. Death. He kills.

They say Mr. Freeh lives in seventh floor, "The Bunker." Hitler's Bunker. Police State. Secret Police.

Newsweek April 14, 1997 calls him Mad Dog. The common denominator between Mr. Freeh, and Mr. Hitler, is that both of them were Catholic, and choir boy.

Washington Post called Mr. Freeh, the Genghis Khan. Who else promotes Larry Potts, the Baby killer of The Ruby Ridges to his own deputy.

The FBI kills. They gassed and killed 81 babies in Waco Texas directly. Those killers are still at large. We know who they are.

You can fool some of the people some of the time, but not all the people all the time.

Waco deaths caused 168 deaths indirectly, in Oklahoma. They killed two in Ruby Ridges, and now seeking death for two other people in Colorado.

as long as it doesn't happen to Hitler in Berlin Bunker. His killer's instinct is satisfied, when it happens to other people. Fifty million died in W.W.II. We must stop the killing from the FBI Bunker.

There is no question about it. Those men are death dealers. They kill directly, and cause to be killed indirectly. They are empowered by Satan. Their Pentagram is hidden under their fancy cloths.

No one is able to deal with a person of that kind of reputation alone. I need help. Senator Patty Murray did her share. Now it is your turn. Please help us and do your share..

The only way to defeat Satan, is by exposure. Satan is scared to operate in light, and in public. Satan works in the dark, in secrecy and silence.

It was in secrecy, silence and darkness that Hitler burned gassed, and killed so many Jews. All Germans didn't know about it, till it was too late.

We must disarm Mr. Freeh, of, secrecy, out of the bunker and bring him to public.

People like Hitler, and Freeh are very powerful when they plot in darkness and secrecy. However, they are afraid of light and public. In public they work by deception.

I am educated in Utah. Mormons thought me to keep records. Perhaps I can submit the records how I cracked the Unabomb case as early as 1980's.

Mr. Freeh went to Connie Chung, crying over her shoulder, and offered a million dollars reward in 1990's. What kind of the country is this anyway? What do we have to do to get better treatment?

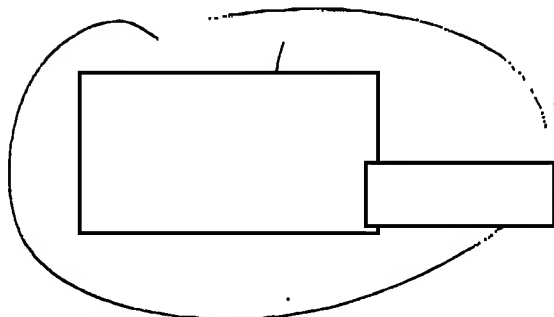

Please find out why the FBI didn't address the lead that was provided to them through the Reader's Digest as early as January 1990.

Why they didn't address that issue in their letter to Senator Patty Murray.

After you did this, then I have another surprise for you. The Freedom Club is in your State.

In Washington: A month after the 1994 elections gave Republicans control of Congress, the liberal Boxer vowed to keep fighting. "You just stick with the issues you believe in. You don't change your fundamental beliefs. You work to get your message out, and eventually the tide turns," she told the San Francisco Chronicle. "Don't think that by being quiet you get your views heard."

Boxer's determined style causes her to operate most often as an unrelenting activist, rather than as a go-along, get-along player within the legislative arena. She will, for instance, offer amendments that obviously do not have a chance of adoption, rather than engaging in the work and horse-trading necessary to build coalitions for their passage.

While she sometimes scores rhetorical successes, those can work against her in the clubby Senate culture. Boxer was one of seven House women who marched on the Senate in October 1991 to urge a delay in the vote on the nomination of Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court until sexual harassment charges against him could be examined. The resulting hearings, which rocked the nation and the Senate, may have directly contributed to the election of unprecedented numbers of women in 1992 (including Boxer herself). But in 1993, Utah GOP Sen. Orrin G. Hatch told her that he was afraid to ask her to cosponsor a bill, fearing her wrath over his treatment of Thomas accuser Anita F. Hill.

When Oregon Republican Sen. Bob Packwood was charged by some former staff members with sexual harassment in late 1992, Boxer said he should resign immediately. She voted to enforce a subpoena of Packwood's personal diaries. She also voted in 1994 against allowing two Navy admirals to retire at full rank, holding them responsible for the widespread sexual abuse at the 1991 convention of the Tailhook Association, a private group of naval aviators.

Boxer has championed the cause of the ailing California economy, which has been hit disproportionately hard by military base closures and diminishing aerospace orders. As a House member, Boxer was among the harshest critics of the space station during floor debate in May 1991. But as a senator two years later, she voted to salvage the project, which provides jobs for about 5,000 Californians.

In early 1993, Boxer and other California representatives met with President Clinton to avert what they feared would be a statewide calamity if all the rumored base closings were carried out. When the Pentagon list was released, a few of the said-to-be-threatened sites were not on it. Traveling aboard Air Force One, Boxer urged the president to release up to $1.4 billion in defense conversion money that had been approved by Congress. Clinton announced the program upon landing in California.

But, as in the Senate club, where her firm views and sharp tongue win her few friends among the conservative majority, Boxer's loyalty to Clinton's agenda has not always been rewarded with insider status. During her December 1994 interview with the Chronicle, she said that anyone wanting to add $20 billion to the defense budget "is out of step with reality." Two hours later, Clinton announced plans to increase defense spending by $25 billion through 2001.

At Home: If Boxer puts some people off with her unrelenting assertiveness, her nature was crucial to her come-from-behind victory in the 1992 Democratic senatorial primary and to her survival that November, when she held off a late charge by the GOP nominee, conservative TV commentator Bruce Henschelsohn.

Boxer's Senate ambitions were common knowledge in California in the late 1980s, but her route to that office seemed blocked by strong incumbents and a plethora of well-situated rivals.

But in 1990, California's Republican senator, Pete Wilson, was elected governor. Two days later, Alan Cranston, who had become embroiled in the downfall of savings-and-loan financier Charles H. Keating Jr. (who had helped bankroll his campaign in 1986), announced that he would not seek reelection in 1992.

because Wilson's appointed successor, John Seymour, would have to face the voters in 1992 (and again in 1994 if he won). Boxer soon chose to go for Cranston's seat and a full six-year term, leaving former San Francisco Mayor Diane Feinstein to challenge Seymour.

Boxer was not considered an early favorite in her race. Fellow House Democrat Mel Levine was thought better capable of raising money and organizing Southern California; and Lt. Gov. Leo T. McCarthy was also in the chase and well-known statewide. Moreover, as the campaign unfolded, Boxer had to defend her 143 overdrafts and other stories of shoddy office practices and missed votes in the House.

But Boxer was missing votes because she was raising money and campaigning furiously from one end of the state to the other. Levine meanwhile relied almost entirely on TV ads that proved disappointing; and McCarthy failed to ignite enthusiasm beyond his base among labor and traditional liberals. Boxer's numbers kept rising right up to the June primary, and she won it going away. Herschensohn overcame a shaky summer to run a tough and effective campaign in the fall and all but overtake Boxer, whose organization sputtered after the primary. But in the end, Boxer survived and won by about 5 percentage points. She benefited from a late barrage of ads depicting Herschensohn as a right-wing extremist and from a late story about Herschensohn visiting a nightclub featuring adult entertainment.

She also got a boost from the national ticket and from the dynamism of her pairing with Feinstein. The two women often campaigned together, an ironic rebuke to all the political pros who had said California would never elect one liberal Jewish woman from the Bay Area — let alone two. In fact, Boxer and Feinstein had not been close politically or personally before 1992. But with Feinstein running well ahead of Seymour, the alliance was clearly a plus for Boxer.

Boxer had entered the House as the beneficiary of one of the decade's more creative acts of district line-drawing. In 1982, she won overwhelmingly in the San Francisco portion of the 6th and ran up comfortable margins in outlying blue-collar communities, countering Republican Dennis McQuaid's majority in Marin County. Within days of the 1990 election (which she won with 68 percent), she announced her candidacy for the Senate.

Seattle, Washington 98174

Dear Senator Murray:

I am writing in response to your November 18th communication on behalf of [REDACTED] which our Seattle Office forwarded to FBI Headquarters for reply. I regret the delay in responding.

[REDACTED] has made complaints similar to those in his current letter in a civil complaint on October 30, 1987, filed in the U.S. District Court, Western District of Washington, a copy of which [REDACTED] provided to the FBI. The FBI is unaware of any action taken as a result of this filing. In addition, [REDACTED] appeared at the FBI's Seattle Division on October 30, 1987, and presented an administrative claim form to FBI personnel. He was informed by letter of November 23, 1987, that his claim was incomplete and that additional information was needed. [REDACTED] did not respond further.

With regard to [REDACTED] claim that he should receive the reward which was offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person known as the UNABOMBER, I am forwarding a copy of your communication to the Special Agent in Charge of this case so that he is aware of [REDACTED] claim. If [REDACTED] has any additional questions, he may wish to contact the UNABOM Task Force directly, the address of which is Federal Bureau of Investigation, Attention: UNABOM Task Force, 450 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, California 94102-9523.

On August 22, 1988, Special Agents [REDACTED] met with Deputy U.S. Marshal [REDACTED] regarding a threat to U.S. Magistrate JOHN L. WEINBERG. At that time [REDACTED] advised agents that on August 19, 1988, [REDACTED] Magistrate WEINBERG received a threatening letter through the mail. The letter was addressed to WEINBERG and marked confidential, however, on the back of the envelope was the handwritten message "It have been said the only way to open a closed mind is with a sharp ax. Open your mind." [REDACTED] suspecting that the letter was a threat, opened the letter to find death threats to WEINBERG. [REDACTED] subsequently turned the letter over to the United States Marshal.

[REDACTED] advised that he took the letter to [REDACTED] with the WASHINGTON STATE PATROL, who examined the letter which is both handwritten and typed, and compared that with known handwriting samples on file with the United States Marshal's Office. At that time [REDACTED] advised that the letter appeared to written by the subject.

[REDACTED] advised that he subsequently presented his information to Assistant United States Attorney ROBERT H. WESTINGHOUSE who subsequently issued a complaint and warrant charging the subject with violating Title 18, United States Code, Sections 115 and 1503. The complaint was subsequently signed by U.S. Magistrate PHILIP SWEIGERT.

On August 22, 1988, FBI Agents and Deputy Marshals arrested [REDACTED] per instructions of the warrant. After interviewing [REDACTED] he was transported to the Renton, Washington, Police Department Jail for safekeeping. He is scheduled to be arraigned in Tacoma on August 23, 1988.

At this time writer is requesting that this case be opened for further investigation.

On or about August 19, 1988, at Seattle, within the Western District of Washington, [REDACTED] did endeavor to influence and intimidate, by a threatening letter, United States Magistrate John L. Weinberg in the discharge of his duties.

All in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1503.

And the complainant states that he is a Deputy United States Marshal, and in that capacity is responsible for the investigation of the events that give rise to the above charges. Complainant has been advised that a letter addressed to the attention of "Honorable John L. Weinberg, United States Magistrate" was received in the United States District Court Clerk's Office on August 19, 1988. The letter references a civil case which is pending in the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, and which is captioned David J. Hess petitioner, Vs. F.B.I. & U.S.A. Respondents., Case No. C88-1001D. Copy of this letter is attached to this Complaint, and incorporated herein by reference.

The letter includes a handwritten note which reads as follows:

petitioner

Vs.

F.B.I & U.S.A

Respondents.

The Honorable Carolyn R. Dimmick, United States District
Judge referenced this case to the Honorable John L. Weinberg, United States magistrate.

It is obvious from the prayer of the petition that the United States and the F.B.I are trying to open a clandestine account with the petitioner.

That is to say they want to come and do lots of things then go to hiding.

Then the Petitioner doing something in return cover up and deny it.

This for that, then tit for tat.

This ugly strategy is destructive to both the Government and those of us who want to have simple plain public life.

The past dark deadly few years have been mixed with horror, and terror. One never knows when the F.B.I is going to strike again.

3 It is the agony and fear that we do not know what the damn
4 fool is going to do against us next.

5 It is the common sense that if the Gov. or the F.B.I have a
6 case against the defendant, the defendant is to get the 7 evidence and trial preparation material first.

8 It have been more than three years the the Lawyers, the 9 Government, and the F.B.I, giving th petitioner the 10 runaround.

11 They do everything they can to avoid giving out the 12 fabricated evidences.

13 The question to the court is if I am the man who committed 14 the alleged crimes, then why I am the only one who is not 15 entitled to have those records.

16 The U.S. Attorney denies it, the F.B.I denies it, the 17 probation officers denies it, and the appointed lawyers
18 deny it.

19 The records of my activities (if they are true) are my 20 property.

21 It is the responsibility of the Court to order the 22 production of those documents, those documents can only be 23 used in the court, they are not good for making oriental 24 soup.

25 Once we have all the records in our hand, then we know what 26 we are talking about.

27 Petitioner is not the citizen of the United States, not i 28 nterested to be a victim.

3 First time I saw you was when you were conducting the 4 Encounter Bay Trial.

5 Every one was doing their job to the best they could, but
6 how do you expect that [REDACTED] understand Sec
7 636(b)(1)(b), and local Magistrate Rule ?

8 Lets be candid; I ask the F.B.I in Utah, about my records,
9 he says Section 552(b)(7)(A), which has political 10 implication, and then ships other parts to the headquarter, 11 his friend, with a recommendation to please bury this, we have done it to the guy do not let it out.

12 Regardless of those statues, sections, and sub sections, we 13 both know that I am entitled to have a voice into the 14 records of my own activities with the United States Courts.

15 To check it, to examine and cross examine it.

16 Otherwise any Gov. Agency can go over do something, then 17 fabricate and accuse another person of doing it.

18
19 The only Gov. we know doing that was the Gov. of the Shah of 20 Iran, and he paid the deadliest price for doing it, I know 21 that the F.B.I, and the C.I.A thought him how to do those dirty tricks.

22 We in Iran do not believe in forgiveness, doing us a favor, 23 you get a favor in return, and the opposite is true.

24 I came here to this country in 1975, believing in free
25 enterprise, and thinking that if I do not do anything to any 26 one, no one would bother with me. Not so; some one but there is looking for victim, it is the Aligator.

3 We persians are very polite to the certain limits, but 4 everything have a limit. To this day I have been very 5 patient and civilized with the Courts, the F.B.I, and the 6 U.S. Gov.

7 In 1979 Iran politely asked the U. S. for the return of the 8 Shah home for trial, they were refused, and you know the 9 rest of the story.

10 Nordic Countries treat persians better, as such they are 11 welcome in Iran, and persians treat their guests with 12 highest degree of curtsy.

13 The world court declared that the American attitude
14 triggered the events of 1979..

15 I can either get the court to order and make the 16 respondents to produce those documents that I am requesting,
17 then bring it to court, and let an American Judge in Court
18 decide, which is the most fesable solution.

19 I can also forget it, move out, and take a bitter revenge
20 for what they did to me, that is when I get more hard time.

21 The choice is yours to use wisdom logic and make correct 22 decision.

23 I am open to answer any question you have, we both need to 24 know what we are doing and how we are doing it.

25 In case you feel more comfortble to let a lawyer handle
26 this, fine approve legal expense.

6 There is nothing in to this that makes it worthe while for 7 some other American to suffer the consequences of revenge.

8 These days there are talks about U. S. opening the Embassy
9 in Iran again, I do not think vengative Iran is going to 10 treat them any better than what American are treating us 11 over here.

12 Why there is no hostages from the Nordic countries in the 13 Middle East, cause Swedish do not harm any one to get harm 14 in return.

15 This has been a long letter, but clarifies two things. I
16 want my records in the possission of the Gov, and every one 17 involved in my case.

18 In the absence of those records, and a fair trial, I can 19 transfer the pressure and frusttration some other points,
20 then there would be lots of regrets.

It is not only previous rulings by the Courts that we should look at in life; there is no law that can say it is absolutely impossible for a petitioner to analyze a scientific social issue with the U. S. Magistrate.

To raise the issue; helps the Your Honor to see how we people look and view things, who is doing what to whom and why. Then make the best decision, so that innocent people would not suffer in between.

The one who is supposed to be in, goes in, and the one goes out.

FIRST

Let's put this F.B.I under microscope

Hope it is not the Iran under the Shah, and this damn F.B.I, does not have the sole power to investigate, bring charges, jail and torture people.

Please God that this F.B.I which is the mirror image of the Shah's SAVAK does not have the pull to create atmosphere of fear, hypocrisy, corruption and clandestine operation.

I just decided to attach this article so that you may see the way of what we are doing. In fact there is any question let me know.

Sometimes you do not see things the way we people in the street see it.

The CURSE of the Shah's SAVAK ran up in blood bath in Iran. For every one person they killed, Iranians killed 50 in return, that cleaned the mess in a hurry.

returned to Teheran from a trip to the Soviet Union. The streets were clogged with demonstrators; she flew to her palace by helicopter and was appalled by the massive crowds she saw below. She was horrified particularly by the fact that the women had thrown away the emancipation the Pahlavis had granted them and were all wearing "the mournful black chador their grandmothers had worn. My God, I thought, is this how it ends? To me it was like seeing a child you had nurtured suddenly sicken and die." To her dismay, her own brother no longer sought her advice; indeed, he is said to have considered her presence in the country an embarrassment, and he asked her to leave again. She packed up her goods and chattels and fled westward.

Ashraf was not unique. In the 1970s, Iran became a wonderland for businessmen and women. Kickbacks, bribes, agent's fees, secret understandings between princes and P.R. men, princesses and C.I.A. agents, Samsonite briefcases packed with hundred-dollar bills hand-carried on executive jets, companies with P.O.-box addresses in the Caribbean and Liechtenstein, secret orders and counter-orders conveyed in private meetings with the Shah—this was the stuff of which business was made.

It had not always been so. During the 1960s, when the Shah's "White Revolution" was increasing literacy, improving the position of women, and alleviating rural poverty, there was a feeling of hope among the growing middle classes. And as a result of his reforms, the Shah enjoyed an excellent public image in the West. He was seen as an enlightened despot pursuing liberal policies. But in the seventies, as the Shah's allies encouraged him to become the policeman of the Gulf and as massive increases in oil revenues led him to concentrate on military and strategic concerns, Iran began to fall apart. Under the pressure of the oil boom, both corruption and repression grew. Many of the smooth, well-educated young men in designer suits making deals over coffee and cognac at the Royal Hilton were in fact agents of SAVAK, the Shah's secret police. They glided through the corridors of power and the universities, attempting to entice and to entrance others. These men did not bully or threaten; instead they sympathized with the frustration of their peers, but pointed out how much, how very much, was available and how wise it would be to grab it. The system might not be perfect, but where in the world could perfection be found? And even if there was no political freedom in Teheran, were there not far more opportunities for advancement here than elsewhere in the Middle East?

But, as with all secret police forces, SAVAK's principal objective was to gather intelligence and to sow fear. Once a person fell into the clutches of SAVAK, there was nowhere to turn. SAVAK was empowered to act as the sole investigator of all alleged political crimes and also to bring charges. It could make people simply disappear. According to testimony of former prisoners, SAVAK's methods of torture included whipping and beating, electric shocks, pulling out nails and teeth, pumping boiling water into the rectum, hanging heavy weights on the testicles, tying the prisoner to a bedframe that was slowly heated, inserting broken bottles into the anus, and rape.

SAVAK was entirely its own master, answerable only to the Shah. By the mid-seventies, fear of SAVAK extended even into the elite. Almost everyone with a higher education knew someone who had disappeared, or whose death was thought, perhaps wrongly, to have been the work of SAVAK.

And in this atmosphere of fear and hypocrisy, everyone was cashing in. The Shah's cronies got themselves appointed "agents" for different foreign corporations, insisting that without their services nothing would be achieved, no contracts won. Indeed, some five or six "superagents," together with twenty-five or thirty subagents, began literally to dictate the economic direction of the country. The Council of Ministers and the High Economic Council took due note of their wishes and commands. One of the key ministers—who later safely fled abroad with much of his wealth—devoted a great deal of time and effort to making sure that the various princes and princesses were getting everything they said they had to have. One of the Pahlavis openly stole and exported for his personal gain some of Iran's national art treasures, in particular gold artifacts unearthed at the prehistoric archaeological site at Marlik. In 1971, in 1974, and then in 1978, when it was too late, the Shah made attempts to curb this sort of corruption. But he was always halfhearted. His underlying attitude was that if common Iranian businessmen were making mountains of money from his policies, there was no reason his family should not also profit from the benefits he was conferring on Iran.

In any court, there are courts within the court. In Teheran the satellite courts swirled jealously around the Shah's relations, who, through their birth, controlled so much patronage in the land. Each of the siblings had his or her own gallery of hangers-on and cronies, the men and women who fixed contracts and commissions on behalf of the princelings.

There was also a children's court—or children of courtiers. Some of them lived pretty wildly in the seventies. They used to bring large amounts of drugs, particularly cocaine, into Iran; their parents' positions meant that they were never searched at customs. There was a Colombian dealer whom many of them used; he came so often that they called him "Concorde." Any child of the court could get him through the airport by simply threatening officials there: "If you give me shit, I'll give your name to X."

Court corruption was increased immeasurably by the fact that ambitious Iranians could achieve no political power. They could serve the Shah as his agents, no more. Such authority as they had, as ministers, governors, university chancellors, all derived from him. It was not so much a gift as a loan, which they knew could at any time be recalled. But they could become rich—that was the alternative to becoming powerful. Moreover, wealth had to be displayed,

It does not matter who we are; there are certain limits that we can distress, and pressure people.

In case of this article, [REDACTED] was tolerance for many years, true that the Judges have immunity here, but that does not mean they should do anything they want.

The first Judge killing I recall was in Iran. The man ruled that in Iran no one can have more than one wife. In Iran we do legal or not, the next day the Judge was shot and killed, his 12 year old son was shot, but not killed. So that he lives knowing what his father hath done for him.

The morale of this article is not that I am going to be violent against the court.

It is that I do not take any amount of pressure from that court.

The article is up to date. Learn at the beginning that I do not want to spend any thing on this matter, and do not want to be a toy at the hand of a group of lawyers.

The court have the authority to issue orders and make respondents to produce my documents, and that is what the court will do, if we do not want to get the Son of the bitch involved.

Every one these days having any record in me, gets me a copy through the court.

That is the only thing logical to me; if they have something on me, then I have a copy so that we know if it is true or not, also nothing wrong with the auditing.

Father of plaintiff in suit blamed

A federal judge was gunned down in his suburban New York home by the distraught father of a female bank executive who lost a sexual harassment suit before the judge, the FBI said Sunday.

The gunman, a retired New York City police officer, then killed himself.

U.S. District Judge Richard Daronco, slain Saturday in Pelham, N.Y., was the second federal judge killed this century.

Charles L. Koster, 67, opened fire on Daronco, 56, as the judge tended his garden, authorities said. Daronco ran to his study. Koster pursued, then killed himself, said FBI official James Esposito.

Koster carried a gun permit issued four months after he retired in Investigators found a suicide note in Koster's home in a Moore Township, Pa., trailer park. The note indicated he acted alone because he was distressed over Daronco's ruling May 19 against his daughter, Carolee Koster, 38.

Koster spent his life savings helping his daughter pursue the case for seven years.

In 1981, Carolee Koster, a Chase Manhattan Bank vice president, claimed in a $2.5 million suit that her married boss forced her to have sex with him and that she was fired when the affair ended.

Neither still works for the bank.

Charles Koster headed the bank's security guards from 1969 to 1981.

Daronco, a father of five, was sworn in as a federal judge last year after President Reagan nominated him at the urging of Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y. "He was known as a judge's judge," D'Amato said.

The last federal judge to be killed was John Wood, slain before he was to preside over a drug trial in San Antonio in 1979.

customer wounds clerk, security officer, then is shot in return

Portland

People were wounded in a shoot-out this morning at a downtown Seattle post office. A customer, apparently angry at receiving a check in the mail, fired and wounded a security officer. The officer, who was shot in the buttocks by the customer, was taken to Harborview Medical Center, according to Postal Inspector James Woodruff.

Woodruff, a 15-year veteran, was wounded in the arm and also taken to Harborview. The postal clerk, Satish Kumar, received a superficial wound to the arm, he said.

According to Bordenet, the customer, a 45-year-old Seattle man, arrived at the Third Avenue and Union Street post office shortly before 9 a.m. and asked Varma, a general-delivery clerk, for a Social Security check.

Varma reportedly told the man the check hadn't arrived, which angered the customer. Varma told him he'd have to talk to Varma's supervisor, Bordenet, said. That's when the customer pulled a gun and fired at Varma, nicking his ear, then turned and fired three shots at the security guard, Woodruff, according to Bordenet. One shot hit Woodruff in the arm.

Woodruff fired several shots at the man, one of which hit him in the buttocks, Bordenet said. Two motorcycle officers directing traffic near the post office then ran inside and subdued him.

Bordenet said there were a half dozen other people in the usually busy post office when the shootings occurred.

One witness, Elouise Frazier, said she heard the man shout an obscenity and then say, "I want my check."

Frazier, who was in the post office to get a money order and stamps to send a Mothers' Day card, said she fell to the floor and crawled out an exit during the shooting.

Another witness, Lula Mae Down, said she was waiting in line to get some stamps when she heard the shots. She said she also dropped to the floor and crawled outside.

Help Find This Mad Bomber

Male Caucasian
Height: 5'10"
Weight: 165 lbs.
Hair: Reddish-blond
Age: Mid-30s

He has struck 12 times and is being sought in a massive FBI manhunt. Do you know him?

By ANDREW HILBURN

TEN YEARS AGO, ON November 15, 1979, American Airlines Flight 444 was bound from Chicago to Washington, D.C., with 11 passengers aboard. As a flight attendant was serving drinks, she heard and felt a muffled thump in the plane's belly. Suddenly smoke poured into the cabin.

The pilot made an emergency landing at Dull's International Airport, about 25 miles west of Washington. There firefighters found that an airmailed bomb had exploded in the baggage hold, setting a blaze. Passengers had to be treated for smoke inhalation; another ten minutes in the air, investigators said, and many would have died.

Within hours, an anonymous caller to a Chicago newspaper threatened more bombs unless the United States, then in the midst of the Teheran hostage crisis, stopped deporting Iranian students. But at the FBI laboratory in Washington, bomb examiner Christopher Ronay concluded from its improvised construction and use of homemade components that the explosive device on Flight 444 was not the work of a sophisticated terrorist.

Ronay could see evidence of meticulous handiwork in the remains of wood and steel parts carefully polished and fitted together. To trigger the explosive the bomber had rigged an aneroid barometer—the kind homeowners hang on the wall to forecast weather changes—set to fire when the cabin pressure in the plane adjusted to an altitude of 6500 feet. Ronay and his FBI colleagues examine hundreds of bombs yearly. But the wood, the careful polishing of the metal components, the use of lamp cord, adhesive and brown paper made this bomb unique.

In Chicago, FBI agent Tom Barrett circulated Ronay's photos and a report describing the device's parts to area bomb squads. He quickly uncovered two similar cases:

- On May 25, 1978, a woman found a wrapped package, bearing $10 worth of uncanceled stamps, outside a University of Illinois engineering building in Chicago. It was destined for a professor in Troy, N.Y., and bore the return address of a Northwestern University professor in Evanston. The woman returned the package to the sender. But since he hadn't sent it and didn't know the addressee, he called in a campus policeman.

The policeman gingerly examined a homemade wooden box about 3-by-3-by-18 inches. As he opened it, a bomb exploded. Miraculously, neither man was injured.

- On May 9, 1979, a Northwestern graduate student picked up a cigar box left on a table in an office. Thinking he had found a pencil holder, he opened the taped lid. The explosion seriously burned him.

The debris of the cigar-box bomb was sent to Ronay, along with photographs and a description of the package-bomb. There were variations between these and the Flight 444 device, but the distinct handiwork and parts were apparent in all three. "We've got a serial bomber on our hands," Ronay told Barrett.

THIS MAD BOMBER has struck at least a dozen times in the past 11 years, killing one person and injuring 21. His targets have ranged from New York to California. His motive is unknown.

The search for the bomber has turned into a massive manhunt. Postal inspectors have studied the names of more than 80,000 people who have moved from Evanston, Ill. FBI agents have combed lists of all students of the professors whose names the bomber has used as addressees or senders of his diabolical devices. Bomb and arson squads across the nation and, through Interpol, around the world have been alerted. There is a $60,000 reward for information leading to his arrest and conviction.

In June 1980, seven months after the Flight 444 incident, Percy Wood, then president of United Airlines, got a letter at his Chicago home announcing he would soon receive a book of "great social significance." When the volume arrived, Wood found the pages stuck together. Puzzled, he laid the book on the kitchen counter and pulled up the cover, leaning away as he did so. The momentary suspicion probably saved his life. An explosion lacerated his hands, face and thigh. Chemical analysis showed the gunpowder mixture precisely matched that of the Flight 444 bomb.

Sixteen months later, on October 8, 1981, two students leaving a computer class at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City saw a strange contraption on the hallway floor.

"Somebody went to a lot of trouble to make that look like a bomb," one joked as he moved it with his foot. The pair walked on, then decided, Maybe it is a bomb.

Alerted, a U.S. Army disposal team X-rayed the package and found it was indeed an explosive.

Seven months later, at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, a secretary cut the tape on a package addressed to the head of the computer-science department. The package exploded, maiming and scarring her. Postal inspectors found it had been mailed from Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. There investigators learned about the University of Utah bomb and rushed the remains of both to Ronay in Washington.

Ronay spread the components of the bombs on his work table and picked up two honed and polished parts. Both matched the Flight 444 device. "Your bomber has moved to Utah," Ronay told Barrett.

Two months after the Vanderbilt blast, Ronay was in San Francisco and got a call from the local FBI: "We've had a bombing in the electronics lab at Berkeley. Can you come?"

When Ronay arrived, firemen were still cleaning up debris. As he picked through bits and pieces of the bomb, Ronay saw a polished wood splinter the size of his little finger. "Damn it!" he exclaimed. "Now he's here in Berkeley."

The bomb, disguised with dials and gauges to look like a scientific contraption, had been placed in a lunchroom used by graduate students. A note left with it said, "Wu—It works! I told you it would—R.V." A convenient handle wired to trigger the bomb invited someone to pick it up, and the lab director, 63-year-old professor Diogenes Angelakos, did. His hand was mangled, and shrapnel wounded his chest and forehead.

THE BOMBER was silent for nearly three years. Such intervals are not unusual with serial criminals. They may land in prison or in a mental institution. Sometimes they get married or enter stable relationships, temporarily allaying their criminal behavior.

Then, in 1985, the bomber returned in a rage of blasts and attempts—four in seven months. All bore the familiar characteristics. The first was a box left in a computer lab two floors below the previous bomb site at Berkeley. Air Force Captain John E. Hauser, working on his master's degree, opened the box to see if he could identify the owner. The explosion blew off much of his right hand and injured one eye, ending his Air Force career.

Soon after, in a Boeing aircraft plant near Seattle, workmen hammered at a wooden box mailed from Oakland, Calif., trying to figure out its contents. "It looks like a bomb," one decided. The men no longer hammered it so cavalierly. Ronay received the unexploded specimen.

Later that year, psychology professor James V. McConnell, at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, got in the mail what appeared to be a manuscript. An accompanying letter, supposedly from a doctoral candidate at the University of Utah, beseeched him to look over a draft dissertation. When McConnell's assistant opened the package, the bomb injured his arm and abdomen.

Finally, in Sacramento, Calif., on December 11, Hugh Scrutton, 38-year-old owner of a computer-rental store, found a large brown bag containing a package outside his store. Bending over to see inside, he apparently bumped the bag.

The blast brought Scrutton's employees running. Paramedics arrived within minutes, but couldn't save him. A fragment of the bomb had ripped through his heart.

Fourteen months later the FBI got its first break. On February 20, 1987, in Salt Lake City, a slight man wearing sunglasses and a hooded sweatshirt sauntered into the parking lot behind a computer store. From a window just a dozen feet away, a woman watched him kneel beside her car and lay something on the ground.

It was a pair of two-by-fours with four nails protruding, obviously intended to puncture tires—and to invite any passer-by to move it. A phone call diverted the woman. Meanwhile, a computer-company employee saw the contraption, started to move it and was maimed by the blast.

Once again, the bomber's handiwork was evident: the same polished parts and intricate wiring. "He's left another calling card," Ronay said. "He wants us to know 'I did this to you.'"

An artist composed what the woman declared was a good likeness of the bomber: a Caucasian, five-foot-ten, weighing about 165 pounds, with reddish-blond hair and a thin mustache.

THIRTY-TWO MONTHS have passed since this last identified bombing. The FBI's analysts think the bomber was frightened by the Utah sighting—but they do not doubt he will be back. On the basis of his bomb-building methods, his choice of targets, the letters he has written and interviews with incarcerated serial bombers, the FBI has drawn a personality profile of the killer. They emphasize that no suspect should be eliminated merely because he fails to fit the police portrait or every trait in the profile.

The bomber appears to be an obsessive/compulsive personality. The attention to detail in his bombs likely carries through to most of his life. His home or apartment is meticulously organized. He dresses neatly. He is a list-maker. He likely drives a well-maintained older car. In many respects he is the ideal neighbor or tenant: quiet, creating no disturbances, paying his rent or mortgage on time. Though his age is hard to predict, he could be in his mid or late 30s.

His letters indicate high intelligence and good schooling. The bomber is very likely a loner. He generally has difficulty dealing with other people, especially females. If he has a girlfriend, she is likely much younger.

He probably talks about the bombings in a way that he would not implicate himself. He may criticize the authorities for failing to catch the perpetrator, or offer vague critical comments about some of the targets: "Boy, that university is so screwed up, I'm not surprised somebody wants to blow it up."

He has chosen targets related to computers or high-tech engineering centers eight times. Seven of his 12 bombs involved universities. A number of these schools have expertise in biomedical engineering and employ many non-tenured staff technicians. Some of the techniques the bomber uses in making wooden boxes for his bombs reflect methods biomedical craftsmen employ. Is he a technician, a research assistant, a medical salesman?

Analysts also note a pattern in the fake names he chose: the return address on the Flight 444 bomb was "Weiburg Tool & Supply"; other pseudonyms were Ralph C. Kloppenburg and Enoch W. Fischer. Is the man Jewish? Or is he expressing an anti-Semitic passion?

The bomber would have been in the places involved: Chicago in 1978-80; Utah in 1981-82, 1985 and 1987; northern California in 1982 and 1985.

"This man is a killer," says Ronay. "Somewhere out there he is making and polishing another bomb. The only way we will catch him is if someone notices something and steps forward." If you have information, however seemingly slight or remote, contact the FBI office listed in your local telephone directory—now.

ASKED HOW he would like to be remembered, Jackie Gleason once said, "Aw—hell, I'd just like to be remembered."

Laughter, the Best Medicine

MALBORN sat in his attorney's office. "Do you want the bad news first or the terrible news?" the lawyer said.

"Give me the bad news first."

"Your wife found a picture worth a half-million dollars."

"That's the bad news?" asked Malborn. "I can't wait to hear the terrible news."

THREE BOYS were bragging about their fathers. One said, "My dad's so fast he can shoot an arrow and get to the target before the arrow does."

"That's nothing," the second boy replied. "My dad's so fast he can shoot a deer at 500 yards and get to the deer before it falls."

"Big deal!" the third said. "My dad works for the government and gets off work at 4:30, but he's so fast he gets home by 3:45."

A TRAVELER stopped to observe the curious behavior of a farmer who was plowing his field. A single mule hitched to the plow was wearing blinders, and the farmer was yelling, "Giddyap, Petel Giddyap, Herb! Giddyap, Ol' Bill! Giddyap, Jeb!"

After watching the farmer carry on like this for a while, the traveler asked, "Say, mister—how many names does that mule have?"

"Just one—his name is Pete."

"Then why do you call out Herb and Bill and—"

"It's like this," explained the farmer. "If Ol' Pete knew he was doing all this work alone, I couldn't make him do it. But if he thinks he's got three other mules workin' alongside of him,

JOHN L. WEINBERG-VICTIM;
ASSAULTING A FEDERAL OFFICER-
OBSTRUCTING JUSTICE;
OO: SEATTLE

The purpose of this memorandum is to provide background information concerning captioned subject and threats being made by him to several different federal employees.

Briefly, on August 19, 1988, the secretary for U.S. Magistrate JOHN L. WEINBERG opened a letter that was addressed to WEINBERG and marked confidential. On the back of the envelope was a handwritten message reading, "it have been said the only way to open a closed mind is with a sharp axe, open your mind." The letter consisted of 11 pages of typewritten and handwritten text and photocopies of various newspaper and magazine articles. The written text talked of how the FBI maintained files on him and refused to give them to him. It talked of the court's responsibility to order the production of the files and said that governments that don't make available documents are governments that fabricate their files. (14) Den

The letter went on to say, "the only government we know doing that was the government of the Shah of Iran, and he paid the deadliest price for doing it. I know that the FBI and the CIA taught him how to do those dirty tricks. We in Iran do not believe in forgiveness, doing us a favor, you get a favor in return, and the opposite is true."

The letter goes on to call the FBI the "mirror image" of the Shah of Iran's Savak in regards to their arrest, jail and torture procedures. It talks of how Iranians took revenge by killing 50 people for every person killed by the Savak. The letter further mentions that WEINBERG can either order the production of his FBI files or "I can forget it, move out, and take a bitter revenge for what they did to me, that is when I get more hard time." The letter concludes with a summary, "this has been a long letter but clarifies two things. I want my records in the possession of the government, and everyone involved in my case. In the absence of those records, and a fair trial, I can transfer the pressure and frustration to some other points, then there would be lots of regrets."

The magazine and newspaper articles consisted of articles dealing with the Savak, their killing and torture methods and Iran's corrupt court system. Another article dealt with the killing of a U.S. District Judge in New York and was highlighted at references concerning the FBI and the fact that the judge was killed by someone upset with the court ruling.

Another article concerned a customer walking into a Seattle post office and asking for a check, and when finding that it had not yet arrived, pulling out a gun and shooting two people. In the margins of these articles were more handwritten threats "this is my favorite for the simple reason that the customer wanted his check and the clerk did not give it to him. Well the customer shot the mother fucker and took care of the problem."

The articles also contain handwritten messages in the margins which read, "in case you fail to get me my records, I am going to do something that is 500 times worse than if you did. I do not want that shit unless you do and I have had it up to over my head," and "there is going to be bitter retaliation and revenge" if his records are not produced by the court.

On August 22, 1988, U.S. Marshal's Office was notified of the letter. They in turn advised Assistant United States Attorney ROBERT H. WESTINGHOUSE, who issued a warrant charging [REDACTED] with violating Title 18, U.S.C., Sections 115 and 1503. The FBI was subsequently notified and on August 22, 1988, [REDACTED] arrested. [REDACTED] subsequently admitted writing the letter but said that it was not meant as a threat. He stated that what he meant by taking revenge was that he would go back to Iran and tell his friends how poorly he was treated and his friends would then take economic sanctions against the United States.

SE 89B-280

During the interview, [REDACTED] implied to agents that he had a gun at his apartment. A search warrant was subsequently executed and though no gun was found, a letter and a catalog addressed [REDACTED] from the "North American Firearms Corporation" were found. A background investigation, however, showed that the Secret Service investigated [REDACTED] for threatening the president in 1983, and at that time [REDACTED] owned a Sterling model 300 .25 caliber handgun and an unknown brand rifle. [REDACTED] was also investigated as the Unabomb suspect by Salt Lake City FBI but subsequently cleared. He was also arrested in 1985 by the Salt Lake City FBI for extortion and served one year at the Federal Correction Center in Safford, Arizona.

[REDACTED] was subsequently sent to the Federal Correction Center in Springfield, Illinois for a psychological assessment. He was subsequently found to be incompetent to stand trial and ruled not to be a danger to society. On October 30, 1989, the indictment was dismissed.

On December 19, 1989, the Federal Protective Police were called to Senator SLADE GORTON's office, Room 3206, in the Federal Building, because [REDACTED] was making threats to employees of Senator GORTON. When questioned by Federal Protective Officer [REDACTED] told [REDACTED] that he is upset with writer [REDACTED] for stealing $500.00 from him when he was arrested, Assistant United States Attorney WESTINHOUSE for originally prosecuting him, his Public Defender, [REDACTED] for stealing his $250.00 tape recorder and the U.S. Marshal's Office. He told [REDACTED] that he would make these people pay for what they did to him, and when warned against it, [REDACTED] that he would shoot himself before we could get to him again. At this time [REDACTED] had also left a copy of a "Readers Digest" article with GORTON's office concerning the Unabomb cases.

LATTER DAY SAINTS - VICTIM;
7/8/1997

Synopsis: To advise Salt Lake City of the arrest of subject [REDACTED] in Seattle and to transmit appropriate FD-302, R84 Final Disposition Form, and bulky evidence.

Package Copy: Being forwarded under separate cover subject [REDACTED] wallet and watch taken subsequent to arrest.

Enclosures: FD-302 and R84 Final Disposition Form.

Details: Subject [REDACTED] was arrested without incident in Seattle on 8/1/1997. [REDACTED] was residing as a [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] with medical problems, at [REDACTED] [REDACTED] Seattle, Washington. Following advice of rights, [REDACTED] indicated that he frequently writes letters that are misunderstood due to his problems with the English language.

[REDACTED] also made several violent statements, including that his solution for the whole issue was to hold hostage a classroom full of students at the University of Utah and to kill each one. [REDACTED] also stated that for each day he was in jail, he would "kill 1,000 of you," referring to Federal Agents.

[REDACTED] agreed to a cursory search of his personal effects at his residence. It was noted that there was a rifle with scope affixed that appeared to be a pellet gun and numerous knives, as well as a variety of law enforcement-type equipment catalogs.

[REDACTED] also possesses a computer, which was not seized.

[redacted] was contacted at [redacted]
[redacted] Seattle, Washington, at approximately 8:45 a.m. [redacted] advised of the identity of the contacting Agents and that he was being placed under arrest for mailing threatening communications.
[redacted] was advised of his rights by Special Agent (SA) [redacted] [redacted] and indicated that he understood them.

[redacted] was told that the charges related to threats received by the president of the UNIVERSITY OF UTAH. [redacted] stated that he is not that familiar with writing the English language and as such may have been misunderstood. En route to the Seattle U.S. MARSHALS processing center, [redacted] advised that he should have handled his problems with the UNIVERSITY OF UTAH like "that man in England." When asked to explain, [redacted] said that he was referring to rounding up a group of students in a classroom at the UNIVERSITY OF UTAH and killing them all.

While [redacted] was being processed, he advised SA [redacted]
[redacted] that "for each day I do in jail, I'll kill 1,000 of you."

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Caution (MKE) - Check applicable caution type block(s) indicated. The caution statement must also appear in Miscellaneous block, e.g., "armed and dangerous".
2. Name (NAM) - Place name in this block. Aliases are not to be entered in this block but are to be placed in Aliases block.
3. Sex (SEX) - Sex will be designated by one letter, M (male) or F (female).
4. Race (RAC) - Race will be described by one letter, A (Asian or Pacific Islander), I (American Indian or Alaskan Native), B (Black), W (White), U (Unknown).
5. Place of Birth (POB) - Indicate city and state or, if foreign born, city and country. Where multiple birthplaces are reported, list verified birthplace or that which appears most logical in this block.
6. Birth Date (DOB) - Enter as month, day and year. Where multiple birth dates are reported, enter verified birth date or that which appears most logical in this block. Place other dates of birth in Additional Identifiers block.
7. Date of Emancipation (DOE) - Must be filled in if individual is a juvenile. Otherwise leave blank.
8. Height (HGT) - Express in feet and inches, e.g., 6'0". Round off fractions to nearest inch.
9. Weight (WGT) - Express in pounds. Omit fractions.
10. Eye Color (EYE) - Use appropriate three-character symbol.
11. Hair Color (HAI) - Use appropriate three-character symbol.
12. Skin Tone (SKN) - Use appropriate three-character symbol.
13. Scars, Marks, Tattoos, (SMT), and Other Characteristics - Place in this block only appropriate NCIC coding for scars, marks, tattoos, birthmarks, deformities, missing body parts and artificial body parts as defined in NCIC Code Manual. If more than one SMT is to be entered, use Additional Identifiers block for additional appropriately coded items. Use Miscellaneous block to describe all scars, marks, tattoos, and other characteristics, which are not defined in the NCIC Code Manual and to more fully describe SMT's which have been entered in SMT block. For example, an appendectomy scar, not being readily visible, would be described in the Miscellaneous block. A tattoo on right arm, shown as TAT R ARM in block, might be further described in Miscellaneous block as a rose tattoo on inside of lower right arm.
14. NCIC Fingerprint Classification (FPC) - Enter NCIC fingerprint classification.
15. Other Identifying Number (MNU) - Miscellaneous numbers may be entered with appropriate identifiers (prefixes). For first miscellaneous identifying number, use MNU block. When military service number is in fact Social Security Account Number, the number should be entered in both MNU and SOC blocks. Additional Identifying numbers are placed in Additional Identifiers block. The identifier (prefix) should precede the number and be separated from the number by use of a hyphen.
16. Social Security Number (SOC) - Place subject's Social Security Account Number in this block.
17. Operator's License Number - Place subject's operator's license number in OLN block. Also show licensing state (OLS) and year license expires (OLY).
18. Warrant Issued By-On-(DOW) - Enter date warrant issued in DOW block. For juvenile offenders, enter the date of violation.
19. Miscellaneous (MIS) - Enter additional pertinent information in this block. If caution statement used, basis for statement must be set forth as first item in this block.
20. License Plate and Vehicle Information - Place information concerning license plate and/or vehicle known to be in the possession of subject in appropriate blocks under License Plate and Vehicle Information heading.
21. Additional Identifiers - Enter information concerning additional license plates (number, state, year expires, and where applicable, type); Social Security Numbers; operator's license number, state and year expires; vehicle information (VIN, VYR, VMA, VMO, VST, VCO); MNU's (see list in item 14 above); visible scars, marks, tattoos, and other characteristics; and dates of birth. Clearly identify what data is being set forth; e.g., Social Security # 423-56-3294; Michigan operator's license 234567, expires 1999; DOB's 4/5/32, 5/3/32; etc.
22. By making an III inquiry, the entering agency may become knowledgeable of additional DOBs, AKAs, and other significant information which may aid in the location and/or apprehension of wanted persons.
23. Changes and deletions should be so indicated in the appropriate blocks.

Re: 9A-SU-47233, 10/06/1997

On 8/11/97 [redacted] contacted the Salt Lake Division of the FBI regarding [redacted] personal effects which she had just boxed up. [redacted] personal effects included copies of all his personal correspondence; checkbooks from several different banks; books on how to build bombs and kill people silently; archery equipment; a blow gun and pornographic photographs which appeared to have been taken by [redacted]

[redacted] stated that [redacted] had basically been her [redacted] companion since 1989. [redacted] was responsible for the grocery shopping, taking out the garbage, getting the mail, and occasionally fixing meals. [redacted] was employed to "be there in case [redacted] had a problem." As remuneration for his efforts [redacted] received room and board. When asked if [redacted] an employment contract, [redacted] stated that he did not. "If he didn't provide the requested service he was not entitled to the compensation."

[redacted] stated that [redacted] telephonically contacted [redacted] [redacted] from jail on 8/9/97. [redacted] explained that [redacted] was told that the family had determined to sell [redacted] condominium, his services would no longer be needed and that he would have to arrange to have his belongings picked up. [redacted] stated that he was "beating the government and would be back in Washington by 8/15/97."

Assistant United States Attorney Brooke Wells stated that since [redacted] is "day to day tenant" and no longer entitled to reside at the [redacted] home; he has been told that his services are no longer needed and to collect his personal effects; and because he stated he would remove his belongings by August 15, 1997, personal effects remaining at the residence after 8/15/97 should be considered abandoned property. Wells directed that evidentiary items, including weapons, correspondence, photographs and books, be taken into custody by the FBI.

POSSIBLE THREAT AGAINST
JUDGE JOEL F. DUBINA
11TH CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS
AFO

SUMMARY OF CASE:

On February 25, 1993, Judge Joel F. Dubina, Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals, Montgomery, Alabama received a letter at his office from [REDACTED] Seattle, Washington [REDACTED]

In this letter [REDACTED] accused Judge Dubina (then a magistrate) of mistakenly issuing an arrest warrant for [REDACTED] after being deceived by the U.S. Attorney. Judge Dubina issued a warrant for [REDACTED] in 1985, for threatening communication.

In this letter [REDACTED] advised Judge Dubina to "protect yourself, recognize the mistakes that have been made, then send the case to the attorney general for your part". [REDACTED] accused Dubina of violating the sixth amendment and of bearing false witness against [REDACTED] and that he would not "go away" unless Judge Dubina forwarded the case to the Attorney General.

While Judge Dubina did not consider the letter to constitute a prosecutable threat, he did want to make a record of the receipt in case other communications were received from [REDACTED]

On February 25, 1993, Assistant United States Attorney (AUSA) Charysse Alexander, MDA, declined to prosecute as to this particular letter, she recommended that the matter be referred to the U.S. Postal Inspectors due to their interest in [REDACTED]

On February 25, 1997, SA [REDACTED] U.S. Postal Service, Montgomery, Alabama, was advised of the above and was furnished the letter received by Judge Dubina from [REDACTED]

The investigation was referred to the U.S. Postal Service and no further investigation was conducted by the FBI.

SUMMARY OF CASE:

During the months of September and October 1992, Honorable Truman M. Hobbs, Senior United States District Judge and U.S. District Judge Robert Varner for the Middle District of Alabama received letters from [redacted] that were somewhat threatening.

The assessment of [redacted] by U.S. Probation was that he appeared to have some mental problems and that his letters did not constitute a prosecutable threat. The FBI concurred with this assessment.

It was noted that on January 28, 1986, [redacted] plead guilty to one count of "Transmitting Threats in Interstate Communication and Mailing Threatening Communications." The remaining six counts of the indictment were dismissed. [redacted] was sentenced to twelve months custody of the Attorney General to stand committed that date.

EXTORTION

SUMMARY OF CASE:

On September 27, 1985 [redacted]
[redacted] was telephonically contacted by [redacted] stated "if you depart my child, I will depart your children". [redacted] also received a letter postmarked October 2, 1985 at Salt Lake City, Utah with a typewritten page with a photograph of a man with a machine gun. Also enclosed was a handwritten note which stated "let me have a good life and your family a safe life". [redacted]
[redacted] received a similar letter that of [redacted]

On December 3, 1985 Federal Grand Jury, Middle District of Alabama, Montgomery, Alabama, returned a seven count true bill indictment charging [redacted] with six counts of Transmitting Threats in Interstate Communication and Mailing Threatening Communications.

On January 28, 1986, [redacted] entered a guilty plea to count five of indictment, (Mailing Threatening Communication), counts 1,2,3,4,6, and 7 where dismissed pursuant to the plea agreement. Subject sentenced January 28, 1986 to one year custody of the U.S. Attorney General, committed same date and ordered to pay an assessment fee of $50.00.

[redacted]
[redacted] in June of 1978. [redacted] was 19 years old at the time and anxious to leave home. Two month after their marriage [redacted]

[redacted] described the incident as follows: [redacted] preparing dinner when [redacted] returned from school. Disregarding her meal preparations, he began to prepare his own meal. [redacted] explained that dinner was almost ready and suggested that he wait, but [redacted] said he was hungry and wanted to eat right then.
He continued to prepare his meal. Disappointed, [redacted] discontinued her efforts, cleaned up the kitchen and left for a Tupperware party to which she had been invited.

She returned a few hours later. After getting ready for bed she left the bathroom. [redacted] was waiting for her. He was extremely angry and told her "No wife of mine is going to act like that." He hit [redacted] with a belt leaving a welt across her back. [redacted] had no idea [redacted] had such a violent temper. She was afraid, so she went to her parents home. [redacted] was sympathetic but believed that she should try to "work things out".

Still afraid, [redacted] went to stay with [redacted] who lived in a [redacted] in Sandy, Utah. [redacted] visited [redacted] in an attempt to locate [redacted] but the [redacted] seeing a side of [redacted] that he hadn't seen before, refused to tell him where [redacted] was. [redacted] became more angry and threatened to kill [redacted] if he didn't tell where she was.
The senior [redacted] was afraid but refused.

[redacted] The divorce was final in Aug of 1979. [redacted] was pregnant when she left [redacted] and eventually gave birth to a son, who she gave up for adoption.

There are no ulterior motives. I don't want to sell you real estate. I do not want to marry you.

When I was five years old, my father brought me a puppy. He was light and joy of my childhood, he would sit around with his beautiful eyes staring steadfastly. As soon as he heard my voice, he was off like a shot, racing to greet me breathlessly, with joy, and with barks of sheer ecstasy. He knew me, by divine instinct!

I admired him, and I was grateful because he came to me. I gave him the very best one possibly could give. No matter what others thought and said, I always loved him as a friend, and the same.

I put myself to do things for him, things that requires time, energy, (unselfishness) and thoughtfulness. We are interested in others, when they are interested in us.

But I am interested in you, because the last statement I recall from you is, "we are not interested." It is the challenge. Forbidden fruit!

Beagle

No good hound is a bad colour.' This maxim among hound devotees is especially true of the Beagle, with its superb black, white, and tan coat. Looking like a smaller version of the Foxhound, this dog is endowed with a surprisingly melodious bark. As for the name, it is thought to derive from the Celtic beag, meaning 'small'—for this hunter is the smallest of the English hounds.

The Beagle is a tireless hunter, excellent in the pursuit of both large and small game. Sometimes accompanying mounted hunters in a pack, it most often travels alone or in a brace, with a single hunter following on foot.

At one point the breed was small enough to fit into the pocket of a hunting coat. Up to a dozen Beagles were said to fit into saddle baskets strapped to a rider's mount. Since then, Beagles have grown somewhat. Oversize varieties found in some tropical countries would seem to be a different breed of dog entirely, for rather than track the nervous hare or cottontail, they are set loose to corner formidable leopards and jaguars.

An agreeable temperament makes the Beagle a good pet. Unfortunately, it is highly prized by medical research laboratories because the breed is uniformly small.

ORIGINS

Some authorities claim that the Beagle originated in Greece. Certainly small dogs hunting in packs were found in Greece as far back as 400 B.C. The dog was later employed in France as a coursier of hare, then brought into England during the Norman Conquest (1066). For the next few hundred years breeders developed two sizes of Beagle, the largest referred to as a vache, the small type known as a 'pocket Beagle,' a variety that has ceased to exist.

THE BEAGLE-HARRIER

Once, the Basset, Beagle, Harrier, and the Foxhound offered hunters a fine and adequate range of size and scenting skills from which to choose their hounds. But no, a fifth type was deemed necessary—hence the development of the Beagle-Harrier. Recognized as a breed in France, though not in English-speaking countries, this cross-bred dog is endowed with the Beagle's keen nose and the Harrier's speed. The first Beagle-Harrier litters were lacking in homogeneity, but the later Beagle-Harriers have measured up to their breeders' expectations: They excel at hunting hare and are a worthy match for boar.

Characteristics

General appearance: well proportioned, as long as it is tall. Compact, muscular, vivacious, and active; exuding strength and energy. Height: 33 to 40.6 cm (13 to 16 in.). Under Canadian standards, no more than 33 cm (13 in.) for the small variety, and 33 cm (13 in.) to 38 cm (15 in.) for the large variety.

Weight: not specified.

Head: large, broad, dome-shaped skull, flattened on top. Well-defined stop. Narrow muzzle. Lips covering lower jaw. Black nose. Strong, broad nostrils.

Eyes: large, round, deep-set or prominent. Dark brown or hazel, often ringed with black. Alert and sensitive expression.

Ears: long, flat, set low, carried forward, fine texture.

Neck: strong, not too short. Sometimes slight dewlap.

Body: slightly oblique shoulders. Ribs well sprung. Chest well let down. Short, straight, muscular back. Loin supple, powerful, extending well back, without excessive cut up. Muscular thighs. Hocks well let down.

Tail: moderate length, set high, carried gaily but not curled over the back. Fairly thick base, tapering to a thin tip, with longer hair on the underside with brush.

Forequarters: legs perfectly straight, strong, muscular. Short, strong pasterns. Elbows firm.

Hindquarters: legs well muscled. Hocks firm, well let down, parallel.

Feet: round. Toes tight, strong, and well arched. Pads hard, compact and very developed.

Coat: short, dense and weather-resistant.

Colour: any hound colour except liver. Top of stern white.

Faults: narrow head. Roman nose. Stop too pronounced. Heavy muzzle. Short or high-set ears. Wavy or V-shaped ears. Eyes small, too close together, or heavily rimmed with black. Thin neck. Weak back. Long loin. Tail too long, too thick, or bent.

Practical Information: A Beagle bred as a pack hound requires canine companionship and lots of exercise. These hardy dogs need special care only for their long ears, which must be cleaned regularly. The coat needs a thorough brushing, once or twice a week, to rid it of dust and dead hair.

SNOOPY

What may well be the world's most popular Beagle was first introduced to the public in 1950 by cartoonist Charles M. Schulz. Snoopy, chronicled in a comic strip called 'Peanuts,' is a white-coated Beagle with black ears—characteristics that would immediately disqualify him at a dog show. But Snoopy is a philosopher, a dog whose musings often go straight to the heart of the matter, and which—even translated into numerous languages—retain comic universality.

Biographies of the Beagle are sparse. Although his date of birth is unknown, the dog claims to have been a First World War flying ace, engaging repeatedly in life-or-death battles with the 'Red Baron,' Baron von Richthofen.

Taking the dog at his word, he was born some 80 years ago at the Daisy Hill Puppy Farm. He is not close to his siblings, who live scattered around the United States, and he admits to little knowledge of his parents. When life with Charlie Brown, Lucy, Linus, and the rest of the 'Peanuts' gang gets too tranquil for this former flying ace, he takes off with a suitcase to explore his origins. Details of his journeys are found in newspapers and books, on posters, T-shirts, and greeting cards just about everywhere.
